Ganderbon's October Forecast.

(Copyrighted 1907 by C. H. Reith.)

Welcome, welcome, sweet October, when the quail shall whistle shrill, when the coal man gets in a cation with his pesky little bill; when the frost and pumpkin peep sings the old familiar strains, and the football gladiators scramble one another's brains...

Secretary Taff will be the leading presidential candidate for the month. He will reach Japan on his trip around the world, and when he steps ashore, the island will tip up. The Mikado will have him lifted to the imperial roof garden with black and tackle, and the populace will hold the roof up while Bill and Mutsu bite at rice cakes together and open a few bottles of saké to the continued amenity of nations.

In our own country, President Roosevelt will proceed early in the month upon his annual fresh water cruise. He will go down the Mississippi from Keokuk to Memphis, while cheering multitudes congregate on the banks and count his teeth. Uncle Joe Cannon will buy another thousand feet of lightning rod, buckwheat cakes will renew their tug-of-war with Epson salts in the innards of man, and the cost of living will take a bird's eye view of the economic proposition.

The autumn nights inspiring shall grow a little longer, and the breath of fall on elder sweet shall grow a little stronger. The husbandman shall sell his hogs and think to prosper on it, but the good housewife will take the dough and buy a winter bonnet. County fairs will be in full blast. The heavy fragrance of roasted peanuts will decoy the cautious nickel from the pants pocket of the loving swain. The toy balloon will drag the small boy around the grounds. The man with the long awning on his cap will sit on the tail of the winged-footed trotter and slap her around the track with a barrel stave. The man in red underwear will rise in a balloon hanging by his toe-nails, and the faculty that Roosevelt is enthusiastic about will weave through the crowd tied together on a long clothes line.

The husky husker in the corn will fill his little ballad. The rascaron in the forest deep will eat persimmon salad. The robin redbreast, growing chilled, will slowly southward flutter. And the angels in the skies will catch the scent of apple butter. The moon will be full on the 21st. Campers will go off to the woods to play poker all night and sleep all day. Hog-killing time will fill the hog with concern for his near future, and he will hustle around after acorns in philosophic enjoyment of his last few days.

The foot-ball rooster, full of root, will go off on his Autumn toot; the player with the college hair, the white the horns and trumpets blown, will butt around till he is thrown and some one breaks his collar bone. The lusty sound of rah-rah-rah will urge the fell and bloody cause; the girls in mass and colors come, will sing and scream and swallow gum. The giant fullback, fierce and stout, will pick a little fellow out, kick in his slats and change his face, and man! him up and down the place, and when the foe shall cease to breathe, will proudly claim the victor's wreath. The farmer with the mortgage who is prone to giving notes will figure up the proceeds from his wheat and corn and oats. And wonder if his cash is hand will pull him out the hole or whether he will have to give a "mortgage on his soul."

The hunting season will keep the rabbit on the wing and the quail on the jump. The crack shot from town will range into the country with his burr-proof gun and his hammerless corduroys. He will flush a bird and almost hit a cow, and then buy his game from a native who sports a bored out army musket. The Amalgamated Game Self-preservation Society will soon require all hunters to carry a large license tag so that all game may know when it is being legally shot at.

The base ball fan will lose his job, the highball fender is broke, the mothball crank is now abroad spreading odors thick as smoke. The ice cream soda has floozed out the ice man slacks his pace, the small boys save their slacks now to buy a comic face. For Halloween will soon be here with pumpkin spoons and pranks, and if the hoodlums pass us up we surely may give thanks.

Be glad, be glad, the worst is past, the next few weeks look good, the tramp has quit the road because it's time for sawing wood. November crisp is on the way. With cold Thanksgiving airs, and the President will set the day in time for turkey prayers.

FOURTH DAY OF ROWLAND CASE

tell, was $2,450, and this was the amount named by her in the affidavit. Sheriff Sears produced last year's tax books, which showed that Dr. Rowland gave in for taxation the following property: a bicycle $30, scientific instruments $100, watches etc. $25; all other property $150; total $405.

Bookkeeper J. C. Allison, of the W. H. King Drug Company, said he had been with it this year and had known Dr. Rowland by sight since the habeas corpus proceedings. Rowland had had an account at the King store since the first of last April. The ledger was shown, showing an account April 4th and was opened on that date. When the State asked what was this account, the defense objected. Judge Long sent jury out of the room until the point could be argued. After jury retired the witness said there was an entry of $1 for a bottle of acetone crystals, containing 15 grains. This was shown by the invoice a copy of which was sent to Dr. Rowland.

The medicine was ordered through Dr. Fisher, whose duty it was to send the bill to Dr. Rowland. Cross examined, Allison said he had no order from Dr. Rowland and no written order from any one employed by him. Did not personally recollect Rowland having ordered any acetone on the day named and no personal recollection of the money being paid into the office. He remembered sending the telegram for the acetone. There was nothing to show that Rowland received the goods except what was written upon the bill of Merck & Co., K. billed out; Dr. Rowland. Upon re-direct examination he said the entries showed the goods were sent out in due course of business. He knew nothing about the transaction except what occurred on books.

Attorney Hicks for the defense objected to this evidence, basing his argument on the ground that there was evidence to show that the goods were ordered or received by Rowland. Attorney Argo for the State cited the case of Stewart vs. Railroad 138 N. C., in which it was held that entries made in the regular course of business were admissible. Judge Long then read most of the opinion in this case which was written by Associate Justice Connor, the case having been tried before Judge Long and his ruling having been sustained. In the opinion many authorities are quoted at the point at issue and nearly all said that entries similar to the one in the Stewart case are admissible. Judge Long said the evidence should have been taken within the rule number 2 as laid down in the Stewart case. Attorneys for the prosecution asked to be allowed to place Appaling clerk Roberts of the King Drug Company on the stand, saying his testimony would bear upon the point of discussion.

The register of Monticello hotel, at Norfolk, for May 14, last, was put in evidence, in it being the names of Dr. D. S. Rowland and wife, Raleigh, N. C. in Rowland's writing. Mrs. Rowland at this point became very nervous, she repeatedly clasped and unclasped her hands.

Drug clerk Parker of Raleigh, said 125 prescriptions had been filled for Rowland in July last year, this being one by the defense to show Rowland was here when it was claimed he was in the east at Ocean View, Va. with Mrs. Strange. The railway tickets bought by Rowland for himself and Mrs. Strange whose name he signed Little Rowland, were put in evidence. These having been sold May 15th at Raleigh. The State at this point rested. Testimony for the defense began.

A letter by Strange's sister, Mrs. Black of Indiana, to Strange's wife, a few days after Strange's death, was read, one paragraph being: "Was he bothered much with his heart. You know when he was at home he was bothered with his heart, but he told me since he was at home, that he was not bothered." A deposition was read from Dr. E. P. Hayes, of Memphis, that he examined Strange in May 1906, upon complaint of shortness of breath found he had mitral insufficiency and prescribed Digitalis. Mrs. Strange's brother, Theodore Foster, of Memphis, testified Strange was sick three or four years ago, had shortness of breath and gasped.

Dr. Rowland's physician, Dr. E. P. Hayes, of Memphis, testified Strange was sick three or four years ago, had shortness of breath and gasped.
