PROMINENT HOSPITALS SAY
PE-RU-NA IS EFFICIENT IN RELIEVING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES.

SISTERS OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD, MONTREAL.

HOSPITALS ALL OVER THE CONTINENT FIND PE-RU-NA VALUABLE IN TREATING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES
CATARRH of the respiratory organs is a common ailment in Canada for at least two-thirds of the year. This condition is no doubt caused by the long, severe winters experienced in this part of the continent. Therefore, when Peru-na was discovered for these catarrhal diseases, it at once became a popular medicine, not only among individuals and in families, but in the great hospitals, where it was used as a preventative and relief in hundreds of cases. These institutions do not hesitate to give their endorsement of the remedy which has been so helpful in the treatment of their poor and sick. Among these institutions is that of the Sisters of Good Shepherd, who gave the following endorsement:
The Peru-na Company, Columbus, Ohio.
Having used Peru-na for the past few months, for our sick and poor, we are happy to say that it has given us great satisfaction.
The Sisters of the Good Shepherd, August 29, 1903. Montreal.
After a continued use of the remedy, this institution has found no reason to change its good opinion of the remedy and expresses its satisfaction in the following terms:
s to notify all persons having claims against the estate of said deceased to exhibit them to the undersigned on or before the 5th day of November 1907, or this notice will be pleaded in bar of their recovery. All persons indebted to said estate will please make immediate payment.
November 5th 1907.
W. L. BARNES
Administrator.

One of the many hospitals which have found Peru-na of value in treating old and obstinate cases of catarrh is the Hospital St. John, who write, as follows:
"We are happy to tell you that your Peru-na has given us satisfaction. Three patients have tried it, one 68 years old, Renou Dupuis, afflicted with catarrh, is much relieved, more than he has been for a number of years.
"A young girl, 15 years old, had an obstinate cough, which half a bottle of Peru-na caused to disappear.
"As to myself, two bottles have convinced me that Peru-na is magnificent as a tonic.
"Before the treatment I could not walk for a quarter of an hour without experiencing much fatigue. Now I can walk a mile easily.
"Through these three cases we desire to make known to the public the efficiency of your remedy."
Hospital St. John, of St. John, Province of Quebec.
A later letter received from the same institution reads as follows:
"Three weeks ago I wrote to tell you how satisfactory we found Peru-na. We recommend it highly for colds, coughs, catarrh and neuritis."
"I have used it myself as a tonic with the best results, taken as directed, half a teaspoonful every half hour."
Mrs. Etta Booker, Dundurn, Sask., N. W. T., Canada, writes:
"I suffered with pelvic catarrh until I wrote to Dr. Hartman, and after taking treatment as he advised, I can say I am now cured of this most trying affliction, for which I am truly thankful. I think Peru-na the best medicine for catarrh. I never felt better in my life than I do at present."
Peru-na not only promptly relieves coughs and colds in their first stages, but is equally prompt and efficient for catarrhal diseases in the chronic stage.
Of course, it is only reasonable to suppose that a great deal less medicine will be necessary to cure a slight attack of catarrh than would be required to relieve the ailment after it had been allowed to become chronic.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY NO COMPETITION

The System Not Perfect to the Extent to Make it Formidable Rival.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Western Telegraph Company, Limited, held in London on October 30, Sir John Wolfe-Barry, K. C. B., one of the most prominent engineers in Great Britain, who presided over the meeting, said in his address:
"After the recent statements in the newspapers about the promised early opening for commercial business of a wireless system of telegraphy between Ireland and Canada, perhaps, expect me to offer a few words on the subject. One ought not, we are told, to prophesy until one knows, and I am by no means anxious to obtrude my opinions. On the other hand, however, I have been asked for my views as your chairman by several respected shareholders, and I feel it my duty not to refuse to say what I think on a subject which touches our interests, though I should have preferred to adopt the safer and more congenial policy of silence and the awaiting of the verdict of the logic events. But as I have been invited to express my opinion, I feel bound to say at once that, as far as I can judge, I do not look upon any system of wireless telegraphy as a serious competitor with our cables. Some years ago, I said the same thing and nothing has since occurred to alter my views, nor do I think that those of the experts whom we then consulted have become different. At that time the length over which wireless messages were sent, was perhaps, 300 or 400 miles, but I then said I did not put any bounds in that respect to the development of science, and that any imperfections of wireless telegraphy, however, remain, in the want of certainty of transmission, the want of secrecy, and in the confusion which must occur when messages are not covered by a direct conductor, such as a telegraph cable of land-line, from point to point, but are thrown with great violence up into the ether, into which they radiate in all directions, to be disentangled and interpreted at the other side of the globe. I am well aware that by tuning or syntoning the receiving instruments to the wave length of the sending instruments, some of these difficulties of publicity and confusion can be met, and to a limited extent this is the case. Secrecy, however, is only attainable so long as third parties abstain from tuning their instruments to interpret the messages—a process which I am told, on the highest authority, presents no difficulty. It is also evident that confusion of simultaneous messages in the ether can be lessened by tuning, but there again we remember that the number of gradations of tuning is limited to an extent which seems to me to be quite incompatible with the requirements of a large telegraphic business. I believe that some 25,000 paying words pass to and from this country by cables during a busy hour, and we know that New York expects to receive and answer Stock exchange telegrams with London in four or five minutes. After making all allowances for possible tuning, I cannot but think that the confusion in the ether will be worse confounded if any considerable number of wireless messages are attempted. With regard to certainty of transmission, I believe that many disturbances of the ether by natural cause must always be encountered, and that the longer the distance attempted the more formidable will be the difficulties from atmospheric or magnetic causes. Thus again, I understand that a wireless sending station of high power cannot as is the case with telegraphy be continuous cables and wires, be at the same time a receiving station; or, in other words, messages cannot be sent and received simultaneously; and, if this be so, I foresee the greatest difficulties in dealing with one of the matters which cause constant trouble with any system of telegraphy—namely, the elimination and correction of errors and the constant demand for repetition of doubtful signals. For these and other reasons do not look upon a wireless system as a serious competitor with cables. I am as much an admirer of the wonderful results obtained by wireless telegraphy as any one, and appreciate most highly the efforts of those who have shown the way in this very interesting development of science, but I remain of my original opinion as to its practical effort on cable enterprise—so far at least, as I can form a judgment under the abnormal conditions of secrecy which have from the first surrounded the operations of those who have the conduct of the wireless system. Wireless telegraphy will surely be of great value to the world in certain localities and for certain purposes, but I think that, instead of being harmful to cable enterprises, it may, on the contrary, be an assistance. Indeed, we are now engaged under our concession from the Portuguese government, in an important subsidiary wireless installation for commercial business in a locality in which the use of cables is far from desirable, and I think that if the order of things had been reversed and cables had come second in point of date to a wireless system, it would have been universally recognized that cables were a fundamental and essential improvement, eliminating the

Before U. S. Commissioner C. B. Hill U. S. vs. Robt. Mann, alias Robt. Watson, for embezzlement and forgery. The evidence in effect was; that Robert Watson did receive a letter addressed to one Miles Collins that contained a post office money order, for $3.00. That said Robert Mann, alias Robert Watson, did attempt to get the said money order cashed at a grocery store, but on being refused took it to the postoffice. There he stated that Miles Collins had sent him to get it cashed. He was told by Mr. Hancock of the postoffice that he must get Collins's signature. He left and five or ten minutes returned with said Collins's signature, claiming that Collins was sick in bed. By the evidence Collins was not in the city and the signature was forged by the solicitation of Mann alias Watson by his sister. His conflicting stories with the officers, evidence convinced the court that he should be held for the grand jury in the sum of $300.00.
