An Airboat The aeroplane is an airboat rather than a figing machine. The only ac-tion of the bird that it imitates is the tion of the bird that it imitates is the bird's soaring, in nearly the same sense in which a boat floats or a duck swims. With the duck, however, there is one difference. It shares the balloou principle, because its body will not sink when it stands still, whereas the acroplane will fall unless it is con stantly urged forward. The duck is lighter than its bulk of water, as the balloon is lighter than its own bulk of balloon is ngher take its own one of air. To dall an aeroplane a flying ma-chine is therefore exactly the same as to call a beat a swimming machine (keeping in mind the swimming of the duck and neglecting that of fishes and of human beings).—St. Nicholas, Speeches were made, prayer was offered and a barbecue feast was partaken of, and the day will long be remembered. Well may these people rejoice. They have accomplished a good work that was greatly needed. Closely related ly blood and marriage, living only two or three miles apart, they were almost as widely separated as though they had lived in different counties,' because of an unbridged creek, and lack of a few miles of road. I rejoice with the people of Clarks and Toscarora neighborho I arise now to suggest another road of almost the same importance, one from Rhems to Clarks. The people of these two sections are also related, but they have to travel several miles out of the way to get from one point to another just because of about a mile or so of savannah, over which to build a road. neavy ditches will have to be cut. The public roads leaving Trent road, one to Clarks, the other to Tuscarora, rup alnost paralel, and about half of their ength can be connected with a mile of new road. The cost of building this road will not be great, and the county owes it to the people living out there, to improve the Clarks and Tuscarora to improve the Glarks and Tuscarora roads.
