THE EVIL OF CREDITS.

The evil of the credit system, lies in its abuse. This abuse comes through such sources as the dishonesty of the person granted credit, or the weakness of the merchant who gives credit knowing that the chances of losing exceed those of being paid.

It is the opinion of some state newspapers, that North Carolina is weak in the matter of having no laws that will enable the collection of bad debts, therefore the increase of dishonesty, the making of dishonest men, who first gain credit from one local merchant, then when pressed for a settlement, become angry, refuse to pay anything, and go to some other merchant for what they want, seeking a new line of credit, or perhaps paying cash, if their reputation is known, though too many merchants will grant credit at first, in order to secure a possible regular customer.

The Journal has no objection whatever to the enactment of state laws that can be served upon chronic and dishonest creditors, and drive such into regular habits or out of the state. Local organizations with black lists help some to discourage the shifting creditor, who has his "account" in every store that will grant him the chance to get goods without paying for them. Yet there is the check on such a person, for no merchant need be in complete ignorance of those who trade with him. Even the first credit should be in some degree assured, and future credits granted based upon knowledge, if the merchant is really desirous of granting credit upon a legitimate business basis. Is the creditor on a salary or doing business himself? Is the well dressed lady asking to have goods "charged," known as to family or personally? Granting the first credit even in the loose way of making no examination of the would be customer in advance, there need be only the first credit, and if a shaky customer the loss stopped right in the beginning. The fact is there is too much granting miscellaneous credits in North Carolina, at least in this section, which not merely make dishonest men and women, but has its debasing effects upon all trade. There is such a thing as a business credit system, and this is legitimate, necessary and helpful to trade interests. It is not based upon statutes to maintain its integrity, but established upon sound business principles, such credit given is practically as good as a bond, for men and women must be honest to enjoy its benefits.

THE PRAYER OF THE PUBLIC PARDON PETITION.
President Taft's refusal to grant clemency in favor of the two hankers Walsh and Morse, now serving terms in the penitentiary for misappropriating the funds of their banks, has excited national interest. The prominence of the two offenders, and their daring acts, together with their trials and sentences, make their case in all details familiar public history. Not least in the matter, in this seeking for Presidential assistance to secure the freedom for their men has been the immense petition circulated for signature asking that pardon might be granted. This public petition, signed with the hope that there who may sign for the originator of the petition, only and that person's influence, in whatever degree it may run, in securing people to sign what is set before them. Human tendency is to quickly condemn, and nearly as quickly to seek to lessen the punishment that the law justly imposes. Take any criminal court, watch the heated prosecution of the Federal authorities in their cases, as well as in the state courts, and when the jury brings in the verdict, there is almost a reversal of sentiment all around. The law has been vindicated, lets make the sentence light as possible. And in how many instances, almost before the offender has reached the penitentiary, there is a petition being circulated asking for pardon, and this signed by those who would have cursed jury, judge and court, if the prisoner had been discharged or given a minimum sentence.

With the inauguration of the parole system in Federal prisons, neither Walsh, Morse nor many, others in these places of confinement, because of the appropriation of other people's money, have much to fear, unless their terms are far beyond the usual modern jury verdict.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured.

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials free.

Old Wordsworth. Owen Wister, the novelist, was talking in Philadelphia about a poet whose works sold poorly. "Poets are usually without honor," he said. "Remember Wordsworth's case. The great Wordsworth was in the habit of spouting his poetry aloud as he took his lonely walks. Thus he polished and elaborated his lines. Thus, too, he got the reputation among the Rydal lake folks of being a bit daft. "Well, John, what's the news?" Hartley Coleridge once asked an old stone-breaker by the lake shore. "Why, nowt verra particular," the stone-breaker replied, "only old Wordsworth's broken loose again."

BALKED AT COLD STEEL.

"I wouldn't let a doctor cut my foot off," said H. D. Ely, Bantam, Ohio, "although a horrible ulcer had been the plague of my life for four years. Easy Enough.

Just before the capture of Savannah General Logan, with two or three of his staff, entered the depot at Chicago to take the cars east on his way to rejoin his command. MARINE JUNKMEN.

Carrier Snails Load Their Backs With All Sorts of Refuse. The carrier snail is to the sea what the junkman is to the land. It receives its name from its habit of carrying foreign objects on its back. Nothing comes amiss to the carrier snail if it is not too big. Castoff shells of small mollusks, bits of broken coral, tiny stones and even fragments of broken glass dropped overboard from passing vessels are cemented firmly to the edges of the growing shell, nor is this curious creature satisfied when the shell is completely covered, but continues to add to its collection by fastening new pieces to the old ones already piled upon its back until it is no longer able to move beneath its burden.

ELEPHANTS AS NURSES.

Children in India Often Cared For by the Big Brutes.

It is by no means uncommon in India for the children of a mahout to be cared for by the mahout's elephant. The whole family of the mahout become, as it were, parasites to the elephant which they earn their living. Instances are not wanting of a mother's systematic placing of her baby in an elephant's care and within reach of its trunk while the mother goes to fetch water or to get wood or materials to cook the family meal.

No jackal or wolf would be likely to pick up and carry off a baby who was thus confided to the care of an elephant, but most people who have lived in the jungles know how very possible it is for a jackal or a wolf to carry off a baby when it is lying in a hut or when the mother is unprovided with means to fight off the marauder.

Children thus brought up in the companionship of an elephant become ridiculously familiar with the pachyderm and take all kind of liberties with him—liberties which the elephant seems to endure on the principle that it does not hurt him, while it amuses the child. One may see a little native child, quite naked, about two feet high, standing on an elephant's bare back and taking it down to the water to bathe, vociferating all the time in most unbecoming terms of native abusive language. On arriving at the water the elephant, ostensibly in obedience to the child's command, lies down and enjoys himself, leaving just a portion of his body, like a small island, above the water. Upon this part of the elephant the child will stand and shout, abouting all the more if he has several companions of his own age also in charge of elephants, all wallowing in the water around him. If the child should slip off his island the elephant's trunk promptly replaces him in safety. These urchins as they grow up become first mates to mahouts and eventually arrive at the dignity of being mahouts.—New York Press.

SCIENCE IN BUSINESS.

The Way the Task and Bonus System Operates in a Factory.

The task and bonus system was introduced by me in the Bethlehem Steel works in 1901 as a means of affording substantial justice to the employee, while requiring him to conform to the best interests of his employer, says a writer in the Engineering Magazine. The employee was not told in a general way "to do better," but had a definite standard set for him and was shown how to reach that standard, for which he was awarded compensation in addition to his usual day's pay.

The system may be described in a general way as follows: A card is made out showing in detail the best method we can devise of performing each of the elementary operations on any piece of work, specifying the time needed for each of these operations as determined by experiment. The sum of these times is the total time needed to complete the piece of work. If a man follows his instructions and accomplishes all the work laid out for him as constituting his proper task for the day he is paid a definite bonus in addition to his day rate which he always gets. If, however, at the end of the day he has failed to accomplish all the work laid out he does not get his bonus, but simply his day rate. As the time for each detail operation is stated on the instruction card, the workman can continually see whether he is earning bonus or not. If he finds any operation which he cannot do in the time set he must at once report to his foreman, who must show him how to do it or report to the man who made out the instruction card, explaining the proper method of working and allowing the proper time. If, however, the instructor contends that the work can be done in the time set he must show the workman how to do it.
