INFLUENCES CONTRIBUTING
MUNICIPAL COMPLETE-NESS.

Primarily speaking, a united, co-operative citizenship is a force that makes for municipal completness. But aside from this citizenship there are contributing influences which are all important in their help, which must be voluntary not forced, therefore cooperate in spirit and effort in their effect upon the municipality.

One very important contributing influence, is the railroads.
The saying that railroads make cities, has been repeated so often that it has become an accepted truism to the unthinking. The railroad is a large help, is often an all important contributory influence to municipal growth, but go back and see what the railroad was given by the city and people, before it "made" the city, and it will be found that the city actually first made the railroad, by granting it rights of way, terminal and street privileges, donated it land and possibly voted bonds to assist its construction, and finally, after settling the railroad up, locally, it then gives it business to maintain its line, pay its expenses and vote dividends to its stockholders.

Even if none of this assistance had been given a railroad entering a city, there are civic obligations it is under and bound to observe.
Every property owner is under certain civic obligations, and so is every railroad in its way equally obligated. If this was not so, what use would there be for civic improvements? Several hundred thousands of dollars are spent in street paving, concrete walks, increased water and sewerage, and property owners are compelled to assist, by placing their premises in agreement and connection with what the city has done. To the same extent are the railroads bound to meet the civic improvements. To say railroads can pass through city streets and not be liable for the maintenance of what they enjoy, would be to say any householder could maintain a nuisance on his premises and not be liable to fine or punishment.

This community has so long indulged the Atlantic Coast Line and A. & N. C. and Norfolk Southern, that these companies seem to feel aggrieved, when they are asked to comply with civic law and order conditions. It is the old story of long granted favors not being appreciated and advantage being taken of an over generous community.

RESPONSIBILITY ADDED AC-CORDING TO POSITION.

The cry often goes forth, that men and women in high social or commercial positions receive greater newspaper notoriety for their deeds committed against custom and law, than do those in the lower ranks of life, and justly, for is not the offense, per individual, greater for the bank cashier who wrecks his institution by taking its funds to indulge his high living than for the clerk who steals to make out a living, due to being under paid for his services?

There may be slack and lax social morals among those dwelling in the crowded tenements of the great cities, for environment is a great influence. But among the great homes on the avenues, there is the demand for pure lives, that their helpful examples may prove influential to those who are in less

"I never felt so near my grave," writes W. K. Patterson, of Wellington, two sisters died of consumption, and that I am alive today is due solely to Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. Now I weigh 137

LUCKY LAST LOOK

It Preserved the Declaration of Independence in 1814.

SAVED IT FROM THE BRITISH.

The Precious Document Would Have Been in the State Department When It Was Burned but For Pleasanton's Final Glance Around the Room.

Comparatively few of the present generation know how near to being lost was once the most precious of our national documents, the Declaration of Independence. It was during the war of 1812. The Declaration of Independence hung for many years in a frame in the state department in the room then occupied by Stephen Pleasanton. Mr. Bessley, commissary of prisoners of war in London, forwarded to the state department some London newspapers, stating that the English fleets and transports were receiving troops at Bordeaux, France, with the intention of operating against Washington and Baltimore. Soon after it was learned that the British fleet was in Chesapeake bay and that it was ascending the Patuxent. The officials and citizens of the little capital city were hourly expecting an attack.

Upon receipt of this information, which was a few days before the enemy entered Washington, Mr. Monroe, then secretary of state, James Madison being president, mounted his horse, rode to Benedict, a small village on the Patuxent, where the British forces were being landed, and climbed an eminence within a quarter of a mile of the village, in order to ascertain the strength of the enemy. Being convinced, after his inspection, that he had no force available that could successfully resist them, he sent a note to Mr. Pleasanton by a vidette, advising him to see that the best care was taken of the books and papers of the state department.

Acting at once upon this authority, Mr. Pleasanton purchased some coarse linen and had it made into bags of suitable size, in which he, assisted by others in the office, placed the books and other papers.

While engaged in this work General Armstrong, then secretary of war, passing the state department on his way to his own office, remarked that he thought they were unnecessarily alarming themselves, as he did not think the British were serious in their intentions of coming to Washington.
Fortunately Mr. Pleasanton was of a different opinion, and observed that it was the part of prudence to take measures to preserve these valuable papers of the revolutionary government. Had Mr. Pleasanton delayed but a few days, had he followed the advice of the secretary of war, an irreparable loss would have been sustained. For the papers which Mr. Pleasanton had placed in the coarse linen bags comprised the secret journals of congress, then not published; the correspondence of General Washington, his commission, resigned at the close of the war; the correspondence of General Greene and other officers of the Revolution, as well as laws, treaties and correspondence of the department of state from the adoption of the constitution down to that time.

Mr. Pleasanton had the bags carted to a grist mill, which he selected as a suitable depository. The mill, which was unoccupied, belonged to Edgar Patterson and was situated on the Virginia side of the Potomac, beyond the Chain bridge, two miles above Georgetown.

The last load had left, and Mr.
Pleasanton was just quitting the vacant rooms when, glancing back suddenly to see whether anything had been left behind, to his consternation he saw the Declaration of Independence, which had been overlooked, hanging upon the wall. He hastily cut it out of the frame and carried it away with the other papers.

He then began to be uneasy about the place he had chosen, for if the British took Washington, which he firmly believed they would do, and very soon after that, they would in all probability detach a force for the purpose of destroying a foundry for the making of cannon and shot in the neighborhood and, of course, would consider a grist mill too valuable a thing to be left standing in a country they meant to subdue. Mr. Pleasanton therefore visited some of the Virginia farmhouses, whose owners were only too willing to loan him wagons in which to convey the documents to Leesburg, a distance of thirty-five miles. There they were deposited in an empty house, the keys of which were given to Rev. Mr. Littlejohn, who was one of the collectors of internal revenue.

Worn out with his labors, Mr. Pleasanton states in a letter, he retired early to bed that night and slept soundly.
Next morning he was informed by the people of the little tavern where he had stayed that evening that they had seen during the night, the same being the 24th of August, a large fire in the direction of Washington, which proved to be the light from the public buildings, which the enemy had set on fire and burned to the ground.

When he returned to Washington on the 29th he found the public buildings still burning and learned that the British army had evacuated the city the preceding evening in the belief that the Americans were again assembling in the rear for the purpose of cutting off their retreat.—Kansas City Times.

CORE OF THE EARTH.

It May Be a Mass of Steel Some 5,500 Miles in Diameter.

Various conjectures have been made from time to time by geologists as to the possible condition of the center of the earth. One of the most popular impressions seems to be that the earth's center, or core, is a flaming furnace. At a meeting of the Seis-mological association at The Hague Professor Weichert asserted that his students of the varying velocity of earthquake tremors passing through the interior of the globe have led him to the conclusion that the earth consists of a central core of iron or steel, about 5,500 miles in diameter, surrounded with a stony shell 930 miles in thickness. Between the outer solid rind and the inner layer of rock, covering the metallic core, he thinks there is a layer of liquid or plastic material, lying a little less than twenty miles below the surface of the earth.

Men sometimes dream of enormous wealth stored deep in the earth below the reach of miners, but experts now aver that there is little or no ground to believe that any valuable metallic deposits lie very deep in the earth's crust regardless of Professor Weichert's beliefs to the contrary. Such deposits, it is said, are made by underground waters, and owing to the pressure on the rocks at great depths the waters are confined to a shell near the surface. With few exceptions ore deposits become too lean to repay working below 3,000 feet. Nine miles in ten, taking the world as a whole, are poorer in the second thousand feet than in the first thousand, and poorer yet in the third thousand than in the second.—New York World.

To Stop Hiccoughs.
Simple cases of hiccough are often relieved by such measures as sucking ice or taking salt and vinegar, says the New York Medical Journal. Pulling the tongue forward and holding it for some time is an effective procedure.
Sometimes obstinate hiccough is relieved when the patient is strong by having him hang with the arms extended and grasping some beam or pole, so that his feet do not touch the floor. With all the abdominal muscles tense, have him hold his breath as long as possible. Sneezing is very efficient in certain cases, since it is the exact opposite to hiccough, being a sudden expiratory act.

PROMPTING AN AUDIENCE.

English Actors Give a Signal When It's Time to Laugh.

"Nothing illustrates the difference between English and American wit more, probably, than the manner in which playwrights write their lines," said Rupert Hughes. "There are few people who realize the intricacy of the science of writing a 'laugh'—that is, a line capable of producing a laugh from an audience.
"A man may write one of the funniest lines ever given to the American stage and see it ignored by an audience because of some act on the part of the producing company or one member of that company. I have seen the wittiest remarks wasted because of the move of a hand or of the head of the comedian or actor who enunciated it. Then, again, the laugh is taken out of a line by the moving of some person in the stage setting or by the moving of some part of the stage setting itself. It is funny how the slightest move on the part of an actor, after receiving certain lines, absolutely eliminates the wit from what he has just spoken, so far as the audience is concerned.
"This is so of American audiences, but not so of the English theater going public. They will not laugh unless the witicism is finished by a nod of the head or a certain movement of the body.
"It is on this account that certain comedies, great successes in this country, are absolute failures in Great Britain." he continues. "Something must be done when a 'laugh line' is spoken on the English stage to give the audience an inkling that the witticism has been completed. Then you get your laugh.
"Not so, on the contrary with Americans. I remember of hearing of an incident involving one of Olga Nethersole's first appearances in this country. Several times during her performance she celebrated a walk to the sides and exclaimed to the stage manager: 'What's the matter? Are they going to hiss me off?' Why, they applaud before they hear the end of the lines! In each instance she was told that the audience was quicker than the audiences to which she had been accustomed to play. She was told the Americans grasped the meaning and the wit of her lines when she had spoken only half of them. The actress, although she received all kinds of applause during the performance, seemed disheartened."—Washington Post.

A Shave in China.
The Rev. Louis Byrde, a missionary, gives an interesting account in a London paper of a shave in China. He writes: "The greatest treat which I only give on special occasions is a mild day shave in public. In the early morning a Chinese inn is terribly dark, and at night bed soon claims one. I select a table at the street front the whole front is formed of movable doors, which are entirely taken away during the day) and, provided with the necessaries, commence operations. Fifty or sixty people stand round in ranks, the innermost circles consisting of children and the outer rings of men and mothers with their babes. Not a word is uttered: all eyes are fixed first on the shaving brush as the soap is lat-tered on the face, and then on the razor as the stubble falls. The Chinese never shave themselves, and possibly to see a man handling a razor on himself may suggest that he is about to commit harakiri in their village."

When the Guitar Arrived.
The advent of the English guitar in the eighteenth century cut and the disappearance of bandora, psaltery and similar wire stringed instruments, or rather, it supplanted them, for owing to the use of fingers, the English guitar, though smaller, could be used for accompanying the voice as well as for solo performances. The instrument, which had a decorative appearance, is frequently depicted in the portraits of the eighteenth century. It was made in various sizes, two of the smaller to be managed by young ladies from seven to ten years of age, the other by ladies of ten and upward.

Fish Delusions.
There are two popular delusions about fish—one that they cannot live out of water and the other that they can live in any pure water, the food supply taking care of itself. As a matter of fact, there are fish in Africa which, having to exist in absolutely dry rivers for a portion of the year, have developed lungs, while in many an amateur's aquarium fish cannot live in the water provided owing to lack of food.
