THE MATTER OF PERSONALITY

Individual is a prime factor in every eventful turn in material and social affairs. The person, a unit, yet by individual action moves thousands of other units, as though one person.

Personality is a riddle, a delightful one, never exactly solved, always with something more to be discovered.

Base ball which has run rampant as the great national sport from spring to fall, in the village, town and city, reaches its culmination point for the season and year, in the final series of games between the champion base ball league associations. Both those who have played and those who have watched the game between rival clubs in village, town and city, have turned their attention to the world's series being played at New York and Philadelphia. The thirty, forty or fifty thousand spectators that may be at each game to witness each individual play, are but a fraction in number to those who watch each play and player, through telegram and newspaper, and who of them know better how the game was played than those in attendance.

In this great series of games that engages the country just now, the matter of personality is all important, in the personnel of each club's battery, and when the game is played, in the personal playing that does the unusual, in run getting or run preventing. The individual play that wins is what counts most. The rest of the team work is subordinated. It is equally important, but the personality of the one, dwarfs the efforts of the others.

In every field of life work, social, industrial, commercial, educational, religious, the matter of personality is all important, and yet in life's great successes affecting the many, there was like in base ball, a membership, a fellowship, a team work, that backed up, encouraged and made possible the one person's marked success, bringing victory to all, who were equal sharers, in the gains, tho' not in the personal applause.

There may be found here and there individual success that secures fame or riches for self alone. But it was no victory, except selfish gain by victory. It is personality winning for others that is the real victor, the true gainer.

RUSH OF THE CRESTED SEA.

Mount St. Michel's Tidal Wave One of the Sights of the World. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon people gather on the causeway that connects the islet of Mount St. Michel with the French coast to watch the coming of the tide, one of the sights of the world. As far as the eye can reach stretches the gray sand, silent, empty. Seven miles and a half lie between the ocean and the rock. Presently a strange murmur pervades the air. It seems to come from nowhere and yet to be everywhere. And then far on the horizon lifts a line of white. Every moment it draws nearer, and the sound in the air swells louder, and then with astonishing speed up the line of crested sea, and in a moment, where it reaches the sands, there is but a space of swirling water. And on the waves ride in the fishing boats that have gone out to sea on the tide at dawn. Many a tragedy has been caused by the swift rush of this true tidal wave, for, save along narrow paths, the bottom of this vast, strange bay is but quicksand, and after the tide has once turned and the sound of its coming is heard no man can hope to escape its reach unless he be close indeed to the mouth or the shores of the mainland.—Travel Magazine.

His Great Generosity. "We are getting up a subscription," began the lady who was carrying around the paper. Her voice trembled as she spoke, for the person she was now tracing happened to be the richest fellow in the community. She hoped against hope that she would get something out of him.

"You are getting up a subscription?" echoed the millionaire, with a sweet smile. "I'm sure you'll be very successful. And what can I do?" "Would you—could you?" she nearly fainted at her assurance—"would you please put your name down on this paper for a hundred dollars?" "There—it was done. He wouldn't have missed a thousand, but she was pretty courageous to ask for as much as she did. His gentle smile registered her.

"Will I put my name down for a hundred dollars?" said he. "Why, my dear young lady, I don't charge that amount for the use of my name when charity is the cause. I will put my name down, of course, but not for a hundred dollars. I won't charge you a cent for it. It is a slight service."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Last Time. The late Sylvanus Miller, civil engineer, who was engaged in a railroad enterprise in Central America, was seeking local support for a road and attempted to give the matter point. He asked a native: "How long does it take you to carry your goods to market by muleback?" "Three days," was the reply. "There's the point," said Miller. "With our road in operation you could take your goods to market and be back home in one day."

"Very good, senator," answered the native. "But what would we do with the other two days?"—Boston Record.

PICKED A SAFE SPOT.

He Wanted an Easy Fall if He Missed the Big Bear.

The red deer of Asia lives in lofty mountain solitudes, rarely coming below an altitude of 8,000 feet. For the greater part of the year he is content with a vegetarian diet, and leads a blameless and estimable life, but in the spring he becomes mischievous, and then a man who pursues him in his native haunts must be a mountaineer as well as a hunter. The following incident from "Sport and Life in the Further Himalayas," by R. L. Kenyon, illustrates the double danger. My Gligit stalker used to tell of a bear that was a terror to the goat herds sent to graze the village fields in the Rakhit glen, not only a robber, but a truculent one, who committed his crimes in the broad light of day and cared for neither man nor dog. Gul Sher encountered him when out with T., a noted shot from among the small party of officers then at Gligit. Behind them yawned a precipice; in front was the big bear, grunting and slavering at the mouth. They faced one another "while men could count a score," and still T. did not shoot. The bear advanced. "Shoot!" cried Gul Sher, but T. only looked round over his shoulder. The bear came on. Then T. slowly put his rifle up and shot him dead through the head. "And why had not T. shot him before?" I asked. "That is what I wanted to know," the stalker said, "and he told me that he was just looking for the easiest place to go down the precipice in case the bear was not killed."

I was sitting hearing the story at the exact spot where it happened and, going to the edge, looked over. The first thing to break a fall was a green lawn of pine treetops 2,000 feet below.—Youth's Companion.

IRVING'S MODESTY.

Fuller Mellish, who was for several years in the company of Sir Henry Irving, first coming to America in his support, told a characteristic story of the great English actor. "We were discussing Tenyson in the breakfast room of the Lyceum one night," said Mr. Mellish, "when Sir Henry came over and joined in the conversation. 'Ah, yes,' he said, 'Tenyson. To be sure I know him. Clever chap, yes, but vain. One night Tenyson and I were walking down Piccadilly together, and as we passed a crowd on the street corner several of the men took off their hats and bowed. 'Ha! Do you know Tenyson thought they were bowing to him. Extraordinary! Yes, clever chap, but vain, you know.'"

SAVED HIS MOTHER'S LIFE.

"Four doctors had given me up," writes Mrs. Laura Gaines, of Avoca, La., "and my children and all of my friends were looking for me to die, when my son insisted that I use Electric Bitters. I did so, and they have done me a world of good. I will always praise them." Electric Bitters is a priceless blessing to women troubled with fainting and dizzy spells, backache, headache, weakness, debility, constipation or kidney disorders. Use them and gain new health, strength and vigor. They're guaranteed to satisfy or money refunded. Only 50c. at all Druggists.

In a Japanese Temple.

"Anakusa temple is dedicated to the goddess Kwannon, a tiny image of gold, about two and one-half inches high," writes a traveler in Japan. "At the entrance to the temple grounds on either side of the immense gate stand two large and fearful looking figures guarding the sacred precincts. Hanging outside the wire grating are a number of sandals for their use if they wish to take a walk, and rice is sprinkled about. Each worshiper, before entering the temple, calls at a small building, and after contributing a small amount, washes his hands and rinses his mouth. In front of the main shrine is a large aperture in the floor, covered with lattice-work, into which the worshiper casts his gift. After clapping his hands to awaken or attract the attention of the god, he kneels, but his prayer is only brief. While there is one chief shrine there are many others under the same roof. One shrine especially attracted my attention; it was made of wood, and quite disfigured and worn through the constant rubbing of hands on the spot corresponding to the afflicted portions of the sufferers' bodies."—Chicago News.

Slack in the Making.

The manufacture of glass antedates authentic history. It is only about seventy-five years, however, since its true character was ascertained. It is now generally conceded to be a salt-chemical compound resulting from the union of an acid with a base. The acid is silica, the same that is found in quartz or the quartz particles of sand; hence the use of sand in its manufacture. The base may be potash (or soda), together with alumina and lime, or lead may take the place of lime. Lime makes a hard glass and one less susceptible to acids and suited to windows and chemical purposes; lead a softer, more fusible and more lustrous article, suitable for optical instruments. All acids act to some extent on glass, especially if the latter has an excess of silica in it. Even wine may corrode the bottom wheels if it contains lead. The nature of the air often fits out and the slight increase of some
