SAILING THE AIR.

How It Feels to Soar Aloft in a Balloon or Aeroplane.

ALL SENSE OF HEIGHT LOST.

Consequently There is No Feeling of Dizziness or Giddiness, and After Raising a Few Hundred Feet There is No Sensation of Speed.

Comparatively few persons can look down from a great height without a creepy sensation running through the nerves and chasing down the spine, and one would naturally think these unpleasant symptoms would be intensified if one were to rise several hundreds of feet in the air in a flying machine. But that idea is a mistake, according to Mr. Charles C. Turner in an article in the Fall Mail Magazine, in which he tells how beginners are taught the use of the aeroplane and describes the sensations of flight. He says:

"The manner in which a course of flight lessons begins depends chiefly on the weather. If it is fine and calm a pupil is at once taken out for passenger flights, sitting behind the teacher or beside him, according to the type of machine, and having nothing to think about except the novelty of his experiences and the new aspect in which he sees familiar things.

"His first flight is a great event in the career of the pupil, and when it is over he is anxious for the next. His estimate of the difficulties that lie before him is more modest, and he is ready to beseege his instructor with questions. He climbed into the passenger's seat and gripped the stanchions with both hands. He need not have gripped them quite so hard, for he soon found that the motion of the machine was not in the least disturbing.

"To start it a mechanic stood behind the main planes and gave the propeller a turn, and suddenly the engine was giving out a tremendous roar and making the machine vibrate. Other mechanics were holding on to the tail booms to prevent the aeroplane from shooting forward before the pilot was ready.

"But almost immediately the passenger observed the pilot hold up one hand as a signal, and on the instant the machine plunged forward over the ground like a swift motorcar. Before he had time to observe and note his feelings the sensations had changed. The machine was traveling forward with perfect smoothness, the noise of the engine had curiously softened down, the ground no longer raced beneath the machine, and he realized that he was flying and that already he was twenty, forty, fifty feet above the ground.

"Flying has been compared to many things, but in truth no comparison is good. Perhaps I may correct one or two common but false notions concerning it.

"There is no sense of traveling at a great height. There is not the slightest danger of giddiness. To me this gave no surprise, for, as every balloonist knows, it matters not whether he looks down from 20 or 2,000 feet—the sensation of height is absent.

"To take my own case, I cannot look down a 100 foot cliff for many seconds before feeling unsafe, but I can look down from a balloon that is two miles above ground and can gaze at the scene below for half an hour without a qualm. It is the experience of every aeronaut.

"It is impossible also with reasonable accuracy without the aid of an aneroid to estimate one's height. You see trees far below you, and if you are high enough they appear to be mere bushes, but you cannot tell whether you are 400 feet up or 700.

"Again, the sense of speed is almost entirely lost when you have attained a height of 300 or 400 feet. The ground passes below you very slowly, while if you get up to 800 or 1,000 feet it is only by steadily watching the ground that you perceive that you are moving. Yet all the while there is that steady gale of wind upon the face that in forms you of your speed.

"In descending a pupil notices that the speed of the ground rapidly accelerates. The chances are that he cannot distinguish the moment when the landing wheels again come into contact with the earth. The machine moves forward over the ground until its momentum is exhausted, and he and the pilot then descend from their seats."

The Doctor's Sin of Omission. Dorman in his "Primitive Superstitions" tells of an Indian who had been badly hurt by a grizzly bear. The medicine man prescribed a mixture of rattlesnakes' heads, wornout moccasins and chewing tobacco, seasoned with petroleum and red pepper, of which the patient was ordered to take a pint every half hour. "He was a brave man, but he died with the utmost expedition," and at the tribal inquest it was agreed that the remedy was faultless, but that death was due to the doctor's omitting to dance and yell.

Which is Yours? The remuneration received for services rendered has many names. The laborer calls it "pay," the skilled mechanic "wages," the city clerk "salary," the banker "income," a lawyer "fees" and a burglar "swag."—London Answers.

Water and Electricity. Since the general introduction of electricity into the cities it has been known that it was possible to secure a very considerable shock through a stream of water, and firemen in all large cities are on the lookout for this. Wires which look as if they might conduct heavy currents are cut before a stream of water is thrown in their direction. Recently in the construction of an electric railway in South Africa it was noticed that a column of steam from a locomotive could be the means of conveying the current, and several workmen were shocked in this manner.
