THE LASH OF CIRCUMSTANCE

like that, especially from a vest pocket. Well, I guess that is about all for tonight. If you will just excuse me for the rest of the night I would like to do a little more experimenting all by my own self. Much obliged for your assistance. If I land my party it will be because of the tips and clues you have furnished me, and I won't forget you. To tell the truth I was not at all sorry to have him make his request to be excused. I had had enough experience with him

"Keep Your Eyes Open for Private Watchmen—They Are the Fellows We Have Got to Look Out For."

For one evening, and I bade him good night with a sense of relief at the next corner. He waved his hand and turned into the straggling line of passers-by.

Pondering deeply over the events of the night and with the idea suddenly popping into my head that I would do a little experimenting upon my own account, I continued upon my way for several blocks. An alley something similar to the one which the detective and I had explored lay before me, and I turned into it with the intention of traversing it and catching my street car homeward bound to the street beyond. Near the further end of the way I paused, struck a match against the wall and lighting a cigar, stood for a moment with the flame in my hands as I made the investigation that I had in mind. Then casting the cigar away I passed into the fan of light that was projected into the narrow way from the street just beyond. As I turned once more into the regular course of travel I almost ran into the arms of my friend whom I had left but a few moments previously. With a mutual start we stepped backward.

"I had not expected this pleasure again tonight," I said as I surveyed him up and down. He fingered his cigar apparently a trifle annoyed that I had intercepted him; nevertheless answering me with a grin.

"I just made the second experiment which I mentioned to you, and it turned out quite successfully. Our man is downtown tonight and is moping about considerably himself. I am just a little afraid that he is becoming meaner, and I don't know as I can blame him under the circumstances. Still, should he confess his guilt by fight, the life of a hunted fox is the best he can look forward to, and I don't believe he is going to run. Hope I have not got you fascinated with the alley habit by our experience tonight." I surveyed him in distinct disapproval of his overbearing secrecy.

"No danger of his becoming chronic. Are you going to tell me anything yet?" I addressed him rather shortly, and as usual his head waved its negative.

"Not now. But I hope tomorrow I may be able to tell you everything that I know. Meanwhile you might bear in mind the old adage that when ignorance is bliss it is folly, and so forth." I turned abruptly away.

"Very well, I will exercise my patience. Good night again." Stepping into the street, I boarded a passing car and watched him from the back platform for a moment as he disappeared in an opposite direction. Then I found myself a seat.

I went directly home and to bed. Although somewhat tired, my experiences of the evening had rendered me thoroughly wide awake, and I slept very little in the hours that intervened between my retiring and day-break. LeDuc had told me that he was positive that he knew his man; had assured me of his confidence that he had secured the necessary proof, and I had too much respect for his ability to hold him lightly. And while I believed that he had centered his efforts upon Bruce and had built a sort of circumstantial evidence around him, there was also the shattering possibility that he had learned things in other directions that were beyond my ken. However, I retained absolutely to allow such a possibility to occupy any real place in my mind. Still, there was a mystery about some of his actions that utterly baffled me, and caused me profound wonder; while as to my own experiment of the evening it had failed absolutely. I went to sleep alone in the gray of the morning no wiser than I had been when I had awakened from my last sleep.

CHAPTER XV.

The next morning I found a note waiting me which had arrived over night in the mail. It was from Mrs. Dace and said that she would be very happy to have the accompany her on a little shopping tour that business provided I could arrange without any inconvenience to be away from my place of business. I at once planned her that I would go with her. I had never felt a greater conviction for my daily, half-mechanical work at the office than I did this bright morning, and the invitation to go a day with the woman I had learned to regard as an acquaintance and not a mere business acquaintance, always remained by me.

THE BEST PROOF
New Bern Citizens Cannot Doubt It.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they cured.

The story was told to New Bern residents. Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the cure permanent. The testimony is home testimony. The proof is convincing.

It can be investigated by New Bern residents.

R. A. Henderson, 156 George St., New Bern, N. C., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are a very valuable remedy and I can say that they did me more good than any other kidney medicine I ever took. I suffered from a dull pain across my loins and this was accompanied by an extreme lameness in my back. I also had inflammation of the bladder and the passages of the kidney secretions pained me. Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured from the Bradham Drug Co., removed all lameness and pain and improved my condition in every way." (Statement given on January 25, 1908.)

CONFIRMED PKOOF.

Mr. Henderson was interviewed on November 23, 1910 and he said: "I willingly verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills, for I have been free from backache and kidney complaint since I took this remedy. You are welcome to continue the publication of my statement."
