CHAPTER HI.-It appears that a part of Ethan Firench, wanting an expor-brace with the "Mercury" at auto vants, has engaged Leatrange, and at he Firench factory Emily encounters the joing man. They refer pleasantly to their first meeting when Dick comes along and recognizes the young racer.

CHAPTER IV.-Dick likes the way Le trange ignores their first meeting when appeared to a disadvantage. They accome quite friendly and Lestrange tells milly that he will try to make something aut of her indifferent cousin and educate the indifferent cousin and educate the as an automobile expert.

CHAPTER V.-Dick undertakes his business schooling under the tutelage of Lestrange. Dick is sheer grit, and in making a test race meets with an acci-dent. Lestrange sticks to him bravely, and Dick guessing that his friend loves Emily disclaims any intention of marry-ing her. and because they liked him anyhow.

It's just a nickname."

Emily laughed out involuntarily, surprised.

"I beg pardon," she at once apologized, "but it sounded so frivolous."

"If you try this man, you had better keep that nickname out of the factory," Mr. Ffrench advised stiffly. "What respect could the workmen feel for a manager with such a title? If possible, you would do well to prevent them from recognizing him as the racing driver."

Bailey, who had risen at the chime of a clock, halted amazed. "Respect for him!" he echoed. "Not recognize him! Why, there isn't a man on the place who wouldn't give his ears to be seen on the same side of the street with Lestrange, let alone to work under him. They do read the racing news. That part of it will be all right, if I can have him."

"If it is necessary---" "I think it is, sir."

Emily moved slightly, pushing back ber yellow-brown curls under the ribbon that banded them. On a sudden impulse her uncle looked up at her. "What is your opinion?" he ques-Honed "If Dick had been listening I should have asked his, and I fancy rours is fully as valuable. Come, shall we have this racing manager?" Astonished, she looked from her uncie to the other man. Ah. perhans it was the real anxiety and suspense of Bailey's expression that drew manager. Lestrange."

"You have relieved my mind," said Ethan Ffrench, and turned his face once more to the fire.

CHAPTER III.

It was October when the consulta-tion was held in the library of the old Ffrench house on the Hudson; December was very near on the sunny morning that Emily drove out to the factory and sought Bailey in his office. "I wanted to talk with you," she explained, as that gentleman rose to receive her. "We have known each other for a long time, Mr. Bailey; ever since I came from the Sacred Heart to live with Uncle Ethan. That is a very long time."

"It's a matter of five or six years," agreed the charmed Balley, contemplating her with affectionate pride in her prettiness and grace. "You used to drive out here with your pony and spend many an hour looking on and asking questions. You'll excuse me, Miss Emily, but there was many a man passed the whisper that you'd have made a fine master of the works."

She shook her head, folding her small gloved hands upon the edge of the desk at the opposite sides of which they were seated.

"At least I would have tried. I am quite sure I would have tried. But I am only a girl. I came to ask you something regarding that," she lifted her candid eyes to his, her soft color rising. "Do you know-have you ever met any men who cared and understood about such factories as this? Men who could take charge of a business, the manufacturing and racing and selling, like my uncles? I have a reason for asking." "Sure "thing," said Bailey, unexpectedly prompt. "I've met one man who knows how to handle this factory better than I do, and I've been at it twelve years. And there he is-" he turned in his revolving chair. and 'olled up the shade covering the glassset door into the next room, "my
