THE UTOPIA IDEA IN POLI TICS.

There has always been and like ly always will be an idealistic no tion that political office should remove the favored one from any active participation in the primary or convention of his party. The fact of being a recipient of a good political job, ought to place the party favored in an isolated position so far as seeking to engage in an active manner for his principal, who secured for him the office. Of course the conception of such a removal from political activity of any office holder, is the limit to fiction. But yet to read of the socalled "pernicious activity" of office holders, the only impression created is that evil is in their make up, that they are rotten to the core.

Whatever virtue a man has been credited with, disappears with his acceptance of political office, in the general mind. That office holders are active in behalf of those to whom they are indebted for their for training of competent instructors positions, is both natural and the practical result of being politically benefitted. And yet those without, are ever heapers of insult upon those within, because the office ble. holder fails to act unnaturally, does not quietly withdraw from politics, and rest easily upon the honors received, and be unmindful and ungrateful to the man or men, in reality to the administration, itself, that bestowed the political favor. The active office holder would be unworthy if he failed to stand for those who befriended him. And yet condemnation of the most political violent kind is usually his portion.

RETURN OF THE BRYAN

TERROR. The most threatening feature in the Democratic Presidential landscape today, is the appearance of William Jennings Bryan, citizen and perpetual candidate. That there is real cause for alarm, is to be noted in the recurring frequeney of Mr. Bryan's name in Democratic editorials and, himself pictured in various attitudes, all with the same intent, to again bear away the Democratic Presidential nomination at Baltimore. There is great unfairness in Mr. Bryan's position. He has declared against his own candidacy, and yet no candidate seeking the nomination has his sincere backing, or can meet his demands, A Democratic year of possible success, seems in term of eix years. the process of being destroyed, a race of most elegible candidates is about to be broken up, and all this by one avowed not a condidate! comfortably with two chairs and light-"I-I'm not sleepy," I stammered, perching on the corner of a chair.

"I believe you're lying," he growled, scowling at me; "but if you're not sleepy, listen to this joke here-t's a chestnut, but it's infernally good." I never did know what the joke was, for I was listening for other sounds as he read. Suddenly I heard a whistle far down in the street; and I thought it was followed by a patter of running feet.

Then came the quivering rhythm of the elevator rapidly ascending, and while the anecdote was still being droned out between chuckles, I slipped out again into the hall and rejoined

"Janitor says there's no such tenant in this building as I described," Jenkins imparted hurriedly. "Might be a guest, of course; but he doesn't remember ever seeing him. So he whistled for a cop, to be on the safe side, and caught two. Here they are, sir." Out from the elevator sprang the janitor, balf-dressed and looking ex-Close on his heels came two
