If you prefer ready-mixed fertilizers, insist on having enough Potash in them to raise the crop as well as to raise the price. Crops contain more than three times as much Potash as phosphoric acid.

IMMIGRATION IS NEED OF SOUTH

Such is Conviction of New York Lawyer Who is in New Bern On a Visit.

SEES MUCH PROGRESS HERE

Thinks New Bern Sets an Example To Entire South By Its Progressive Spirit.

Isaac Allen, a prominent lawyer of New York City, is in the city spending several days with his family, his wife, Mrs. B. Allen, having recently opened a store on Middle street. This is Mr. Allen's second visit to New Bern and he is greatly impressed with the progress which has been made by the city since his last visit. In an interview given a Journal man yesterday he said: "There is a very apt German saying, which, rendered in English, means, 'He tarried for a while and saw for a mile.'"

"I am a stranger in this town, came here on a visit. Three months ago I was here and stayed for about one week. When I first saw New Bern I was struck by its beauty. Coming from New York, the American metropolis, I could not be impressed by the size of New Bern, nor by the towering height of the office building on the corner of Middle and Pollock streets. But the cleanliness and evenness of its paved streets, the fine quality of drinking water, the extended sewer system, the artistic architecture of many of its private residences, the two daily newspapers, the enterprising spirit of its business men, the civic pride and consciousness of its citizens, and, above all, the natural beauty of its scenery, the two rivers holding this little town in their fond embrace, all these cannot fail to impress any stranger at all susceptible to the influences of beauty and harmony.

"Only three months passed since my last visit, and in that short space of time I find so many changes for the better. Street cars have been installed and are running on scheduled time. The Journal has been enlarged from four pages to eight, and its columns are crowded with attractive advertisements, and its appearance and editorial make-up much improved. A municipal dinner was given to boost the town, a base ball team is in the embryonic stages of formation, talk of a city park and the extension of the car service is in the air. I find activity, enthusiasm and an abiding faith in the future and possibilities of the city, and a general desire and determination to work for the prosperity of New Bern.

Progress on Every Hand.

"I find signs of progress on every hand. Everything has improved in appearance except your town clock in the Post-office building. Three months ago I could not tell the time by it unless I was within one hundred feet from it, nor can I tell the time now; and I wonder whether any one else can. The combination of colors is such that one has to go over and feel the clock hands to be able to tell it apart from the dial. But I suppose this is not the fault of New Bern. The Post-office building is the property of the Federal Government and the city cannot do anything to improve its usefulness, except to petition Congress for an appropriation to repaint the hands or the dial of the clock; and now, that we will soon have a Democratic Congress and President the chances are that an appropriation would be made for that purpose.

"But aside from the time furnished by the Federal Government New Bern is certainly not behind the times. One can see signs of progress everywhere and if New Bern is representative of the spirit that is now animating the South generally, it is to be hoped that pretty soon the spot will come into its own and take the place in the Union of States to which it is, by reason of its natural resources of wealth, entitled.

Errs in One Thing.

"In one thing, however, I believe, the South errs, and that is in its opposition to immigration. The West is a couple of hundred years younger than the South, and yet it surpasses it in manufacture, industry, mining and even in agriculture. The West is bubbling with life. Cities grow up overnight and are populated by thousands in no time. Large tracts of non-productive land are turned into populous cities and prosperous farms. The air is filled with the shrill sound of the factory whistle and the booming thunder of the railroad trains. And the West is not opposed to immigration. On the contrary, it invites and encourages European immigrants to settle, and is affording them all possible opportunities to make their homes there.

"I think the South errs in discouraging immigrants from settling here. The Southern people, undoubtedly, know a good deal how to live and how to adjust their affairs to suit their convenience. But a few new ideas brought over from the other side of the Atlantic, ideas of labor, ideas of business and farming, may come in handy. The South should be willing to receive a few suggestions, even though they come from abroad. There is something very useful these Europeans bring over here, and the South should not surround itself with a Chinese wall shutting out all strangers.

"I hope that the enterprising spirit of New Bern will eventually spread throughout the Southern States and make them more kindly disposed to immigration."
