

SUPPOSED BLANK CARTRIDGE KILLS

COLORED WOMAN SHOT TO DEATH LAST NIGHT BY HER SON.

The toy pistol added another victim to its long list when Callie Dove, an eleven-year-old colored boy whose home is at No. 6 Fleet street, shot and killed Mary Liza Dove, his mother, shortly after 7 o'clock last night.

At the time of the accident the boy and his mother were sitting in the living room of their home, the former was playing with a "blank" pistol. He had a box of cartridges which he had been firing in the pistol and taking one of these from the box he placed it in the pistol and discharged it. The supposed "blank" cartridge proved to be one loaded with a bullet and this struck the boy's mother and plowed its way through her body to the heart, and she fell to the floor.

The boy was badly frightened and ran screaming from the house and called for aid. Several persons living in that locality rushed to the home and after placing the woman on the bed sent for physicians. Drs. Mann, Styrone, and Moore were soon on the scene and made an examination but they were unable to render any aid and the woman died a few minutes later without regaining consciousness.

After the boy had fired the fatal shot he threw the pistol out of the door and it was later found there by an officer. Just how the cartridge containing the bullets found its way among the "blanks" will probably never be known as no one about the boy's home could give the least information in regards to a probable solution of this question. From Daily Journal March 27.

A ROYAL FLUTE PLAYER.

Frederick the Great Used to Move His Auditors to Tears.

Abdul Hamid used to amuse himself while he was enjoying life at Yildiz kiosk by strumming "Il Trovatore" on the piano. George III. was fond of shouting the melodies of Handel's choruses for the delectation of his court, but the world has seen no real royal musician since Frederick the Great played his last tune on his flute. It seems that the king excelled in adagio movements, into which he infused a warmth and tenderness of feeling that would hardly have been expected from the conqueror of Kossuth and the friend of Voltaire. "It is difficult to listen to his performances without weeping," says one musician.

One reason why he preferred adagio was that he was somewhat short of breath, while he made him eschew orchestral accompaniments for the more delicate assistance of the clavichord when he was practicing.

Toward the end of the Seven Years' war he sat down to play in a quartet and at the finish cried enthusiastically, "It is as sweet as sugar!" His companions were not so sure, for Frederick had lost a tooth, and his fingers had stiffened with gout. Finally in 1778 he had to give up his flute playing, and "I have lost my best friend" was the wall of the disconsolate monarch. Paris Journal de's Debata.

Almost Too Much. Along the long, lone country road tramped a man and his wife. The latter, a tall, gaunt female, was bullying the meek little partner of her sorrows who trudged just ahead of her with reluctant steps. Suddenly the woman, turning, saw a bull racing madly down the road behind them. She quickly sought refuge in the hedge, but her companion, conscious only of his woes, went meekly forward. The bull caught him up and sent him spinning into a muddy ditch before it raced forward on its mad way.

As the funny looking object crawled from his watery resting place he saw his gaunt wife coming toward him. At the sight of her what temper he had in his possession rose.

"See, Maria, if—if you hit me again like that, you'll make me—er—down right mad, so I warn you!"—Exchange

HOW ONE WOMAN WON

Her Health and Strength Back Again by The Use of Cardul.

Tampa, Fla.—In a letter from this city, Mrs. E. C. Corum writes: "I was all weakened and worn out with womanly troubles. My husband brought me some Cardul as a tonic, and, from the first day, it seemed to help."

I had almost lost my reason, but thanks to Cardul, I did not. Soon, I felt and looked like a new woman. I think the remedy is wonderful. I recommend it to my friends, for I have received great benefit from it."

Cardul acts specifically on the weakened womanly organs, strengthening the muscles and nerves, and building them up to health.

It helps to refresh the worn-out nervous system and relieves the effects of overwork, both mental and physical.

Fifty years' successful use fully prove the merit of this purely vegetable, tonic remedy for women.

In every community, there live some who have been benefited by Cardul. The beneficial effects of this time tested woman's remedy, soon show themselves in many different ways. Try it.

"No, none of these lists suggest my personality at all. You see, I'm a great race peep, adore drama, read classics in the original, sympathize with the woman's movement, travel a good deal and am intensely temperamental. The hat I want must convey all this."—Satire.

Looking Forward. Friend—Have you named the baby yet? Proud Mother—No; we must be very careful to give him a nice one, because there will be so many named after him when he becomes president.

That Bloomin' Bird. Little Mary went into the country on a visit to her grandmother. Walking in the garden she chanced to see a peacock, a bird she had never seen before. She ran quickly into the house and cried out: "O, grandma, come out and see! There's an old chicken in full bloom!"—Col. Maria State.

English Earthquakes. English earthquakes are not uncommon, but we can rejoice that they have decreased in severity, for the damage done nowadays is as nothing compared with the ravages wrought by early English earthquakes. In 1380, for instance, part of St. Paul's cathedral was wrecked by an earthquake shock, and at an earlier date Glastonbury abbey had been completely destroyed. Staffordshire, where the latest shock was felt, would appear to be the earthquake area of England, for shocks were also felt there in 1603. Even as recently as 1894, however, an English earthquake was severe enough to require a mansion house fund to repair its ravages in the eastern counties.—London Chronicle.

London Street Beggars. Speaking of the swarm of beggars and "panhandlers" in the English metropolis, the London Times says: "The streets of London never fail to attract the professional beggar and never disappoint him." The Mendicity society tells us that a beggar can earn more than the wages of the average working man and that it is probably no exaggeration to say that well over $500,000 is given away haphazard to beggars in the streets of London every year."

The Law. Of all the parts of a law, the most effectual is the vindictory, for it is but lost labor to say, "Do this or avoid that," unless we also declare, "This shall be the consequence of your non-compliance." The main strength and force of a law consist in the penalty annexed to it.—Blackstone.

Finding Ancestors. Newrich—How far back does my family run? Genealogist—That's for you to decide. We'll go as far back as you wish to pay for, sir.—Judge.

It is not you who possess riches, but your riches which possess you.—Blon.

The Good Old Days. From the Galveston News.) Moreover, the cost of living was a good deal lower when a woman felt all right to go on a visit to the neighbors with a shawl on her head and her bare hands wrapped in her apron.
