Altogether now for a sane Fourth which is a Fourth of rest and comfortable recreation. (We lay the emphasis on "comfortable.")

We suggest that the stores close for at least a part of the day to-day. Give the salespeople a chance to celebrate the Fourth.

Col. Roosevelt has taken a sly at defining "The New Freedom," but folks in the country now are listening to that other expert on the subject—President Woodrow Wilson.

A Democratic Senator withdrew from the caucus Wednesday and precipitated a little excitement in Senatorial circles. Well, Democrats have a day of acting to suit themselves. The withdrawal of Mr. Hitchcock from the caucus was one of the most Democratic of the occurrences in Washington in recent months.

The Greensboro News says that the demand for lumber in Greensboro far exceeds the supply. The population in Greensboro and everywhere else is growing all the while and all hands of us want a shelter of some sort. This being the case whatever Congress and President Wilson may do to the lumber tariff, the lumber industry ought not to suffer materially.

The Agricultural Commission which this country sent abroad is turning up some interesting facts. At last accounts there was a section of the commission in Hungary, and there is was ascertained, among many other things, that the Hungarians use their cows as draft animals as well as the source of the milk supply. But this is a custom which is not likely to become popular in America. It occurs to us that such a practice would lower the food value of the milk and might actually cause it to have a harmful effect.

Warm over in Europe too. See that the Bulgars and Serbs have been at it again.

An exchange says England is fast coming to rival France as a nation where the rule is "more coffins than cradles." But it must be remembered that cradles are different from coffins in that they can be used over and over.

Some of the Virginia exchanges are finding fault with the Richmond Times-Dispatch because it is so vigorously progressive, pointing out the fact that the Times-Dispatch was in yester years more or less reactionary. Well, it is better to see a light late than not to see it at all, isn't it?

They are saying that Colonel Mulhall has been lying on the National Manufacturers' Association. But any one who remembers the sort of hostility which the said Association has always manifested towards tariff reform will understand that its zeal might well have carried it to extremes at least some of the extremes that the Colonel has cited in his "confessions." Naturally a protected industry cannot look with any degree of satisfaction upon a proposition to deny it a continuation of special favors.

THE HOLIDAY-LOVING SPIRIT.

"The holiday-loving spirit is to be encouraged," says the Richmond Virginian. "It is wholesome. Bums, malcontents and millionaires know nothing of holidays. The people who have nothing to do but enjoy themselves rarely enjoy anything. The real fun and enjoyment of a great holiday is not among those elaborately attired in appropriate costume who ride secluded in the reserved coaches or go everywhere in automobiles. It is among the masses of the people the crowds and throngs, who just put on the best they have and go ahead taking their babies and families along because they have to." These latter are the folks that get the best out of life anyway, whether it be a holiday or the common run of things that you consider. The sense of contrast is essential to rest. The man who works and works hard can rest and can appreciate rest and can get the utmost satisfaction out of the small pleasures of life.

However, the Virginian really disagreed a little. It started out with the assertion that the holiday-loving spirit is wholesome. One naturally expected it to go on and tell wherein it is wholesome. We should say that it is wholesome in that it shows that the masses of the people are not too much over to the world's goods. He is willing to forego a few of the pleasures temporarily and give himself over unreservedly to having a good time. The holiday loving spirit is also wholesome in that it shows a capacity for enjoyment. It would be deplorable if people generally should get so engrossed in the daily grind of their duties that they could not enjoy the rest and recreation to be had out of a holiday.

But in spite of all this, we think it a bit unfortunate that not a one of the great American holidays falls in one of the really pleasant months like April or October.

If it takes hot weather to bring cotton, there can no longer be any doubt that a bumper crop will be harvested this coming fall.

Wilson's Gettysburg speech, like all the other public utterances of this truly great and good man, was a marvel of eloquence and wholesome sentiment. He has the gift of expression as possessed we believe by no other man in public life today.

Col. Henry Watterson says "the people in this country are too much governed. But what is the Colonel going to do about it? He has been arguing against that very thing all his life and the country has not given him heed. It would seem that he ought to bow to the will of the majority and stop making a wry face over it. Majorities have been known to be right, and lone editors, no matter if gifted with a fine command of picturesque English, have been known to be wrong.

Col. Henry Watterson and Woodrow Wilson both made Fourth of July speeches. The former advocated in substance the standpat theory of government. They are best governed who are least governed, he argued. President Wilson maintained that there is much to be done to guarantee equality of opportunity and to prevent the powerful from overreaching the weak. We do not see how anyone who has been watching the course of events at the capital of the nation can disagree with the President.

THEY LIKE TO COME TO NEW BERN.

That New Bern is a place to which people like to come was well demonstrated by the crowds that were in attendance here Friday. It was a scorching hot day, but weather conditions don't have much of a deterrent effect when a day's outing is involved. Visitors came Friday from all directions and from surprisingly great distances. The two amusement parks were well patronized and the folks generally appeared to be pleased with the entertainment afforded them while in the city.

As far as the writer observed or heard there was comparatively little disorder. It has taken young men and boys a long time to find out that there is nothing "big" in being "half-shot" as a way of celebrating a holiday, but an increasingly large number of them appear at last to have learned the lesson. So the fact that there was little or no drunkenness in connection with New Bern's celebration of the Fourth is to our mind one of the reasons why the celebration can be looked back upon with unmixed pleasure.

As compared with last year's celebration the occasion of this year was marvellous. It will be impossible of course to make next year's observance as much greater than this year's, as this year's was greater than last year's, but there will be much improvement of course and next year's event should draw a still larger crowd and be a still greater success.

LOOKING AT QUESTIONS FROM ALL ANGLES.

Dr. Cyrus Thompson of Richlands has written for the records of the North Carolina Medical Society a most excellent and appreciative sketch of the life and character of the late Dr. Frank Duffy. Dr. Duffy had the faculty of reaching right conclusions about matters which came before him for solution and this trait is well described by Dr. Thompson.

"Not everything that he touched turned to gold, but value attached to whatever he considered valuable. His judgments of conditions and his sense of values were everywhere so unerring and patient, that his advice was confidently sought in business and safely acted upon by his friends and acquaintances. It was always worth while to know what Frank Duffy thought about the matter. A man not only of scope but of telegraphic also, of wonderfully comprehensive and logical mind, of unvarnished and untarnished integrity, in manliness of character and greatness of mind he was not less than the greatest who has graced this society with his membership."

While, as was remarked on this page a few days ago, the faculty of accurate judgment is partly born in a man it is not to be doubted that there are habits not impossible of formation which lead up to the acquirement of at least a degree of such a faculty. From what Dr. Thompson writes it is plain that Dr. Duffy was a man who took his time in reaching conclusions. He formed the habit of refusing to jump at conclusions and of looking at problems from all angles before deciding what to do about them. Too many people act on impulse or on hastily formed conclusions. It pays to take the trouble of looking before leaping.

AN EQUESTRIAN STATUE TO STONEWALL JACKSON.
 The Stone wall Jackson Monument

Association, of Richmond, Va., has begun a movement for the erection in that city of an equestrian statue to the great Confederate leader. In all the years since Jackson first attracted the attention of the world by his signal service at the first battle of Manassas, no equestrian statue in his honor has been raised in the old capital of the Confederacy. Rev. J. Powers Smith, president of the association points out. But it has now been determined that this long-deferred tribute shall be provided, and that "every Southern man, woman and child" shall have "the privilege of making a contribution and having his or her name and address deposited in the corner stone as one of its builders."

An adequate memorial of Jackson is needed in Richmond, and if placed in Capitol Square would make a notable addition to the striking and noble group of eminent Virginians who are there commemorated in bronze or marble. If "every man, woman and child in the South" would respond to this appeal with only a cent a sufficient fund could be insured at once. There will be less difficulty, we take it, in raising the money than in giving satisfactory artistic expression to the work. There are thousands of people in Maryland, and indeed, throughout the country, we believe, who would be glad to be numbered among the contributors for Jackson is one of the Civil War figures who grows larger he longer he is studied, and who makes an extraordinary appeal to the popular as well as to the military imagination. He was as strong and singular in character as he was unusual and masterful in genius, and it will require an artist of true inspiration to produce a result worthy of the original. Such an artist, we have no doubt, will be found, for such a subject should fire artistic ambition, and such a task properly executed will place the sculptor who does it in the Hall of Fame. What Jackson was in character and soul innumerable writers have tried to describe with more or less success, leaving many of us still seeing him as through a glass darkly. What he was in a military sense we know from the almost universal belief that had he not fallen at Chancellorsville the battle of Gettysburg either would never have occurred, or would have had a different termination.

We are glad to see this tardy tribute to this wonderful American soldier. His fame does not need it, but until he is properly represented in Richmond one of the greatest of Virginia's sons will be missing from the sculptured array of soldiers and statesmen that she has gathered at her capital as the ideals for which she stands.—Baltimore Sun.

There is more Catarrh in this section in the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proved Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. THREE THOUSAND VISITORS HERE

A Record-Breaking Number Of People Spent The Fourth In New Bern.

ADVERTISING WHAT DID IT

Newspapers All Over East Carolina Have Had Write-Ups of Big Celebration.

Yesterday morning the fast of the visitors who spent the "Glorious Fourth" in New Bern returned to their homes in various towns and cities in this section of the State.

It is estimated that there were three thousand visitors in the city on Friday. The Norfolk and Southern Railway Company sold twenty-three hundred tickets to New Bern from various points along their line. Just how many came in via the Atlantic Coast Line road is not known but the number would probably reach the two hundred mark.

In addition to those who came by rail there were a number of excursions operated by river steamers and many private boat owners brought in parties from the nearby towns, while still others came in on bicycles and in carriages and wagons.

For weeks the newspapers all over Eastern North Carolina have carried numerous write-ups of the big events to be held there on July 4, and as has been demonstrated time and again the way to get a crowd is to advertise. The day was a good one for the local merchants. During the forenoon their places of business were open and almost every store was crowded with shoppers.

The next holiday of importance is Labor Day which, this year, falls on Monday, September 1, and it is understood that the day will be celebrated here in a manner similar to the Fourth of July.
