For two years past I have been sick and under the care of two of the best doctors we have. The first to greet the convicts outsid the prison yard were photographers. In an instant, despite the heavy chains on their legs, the convicts made a rush for the camera men. With their unshackled hands they picked up stones from the gravel path and hurled them at the photographers. A thousand villagers, mostly women, fled from the scene. About 50 guards who led the felons lost their heads and stormed the photographers, too, permitting no pictures to be taken on the State's properry. From the cell house came deafening roars as the convicts passed. There were curses for the guards and even for the chaplains who walked at the end of the procession. Insults were hurled at the women sightseers. When the convicts reached the railroad platform it was ne cessary to stretch a rope to prevent them from pushing the guards in front of the fast trains which passed. During the afternoon 500 to 600 convicts were released from their cells ,although about 400, including the strikers and other matineers, continued in confinement. At 3 o'clock the wailings of these 400 ceased. There were 20 calls for the prison physician during the next half hour. Each of the complainants said he was suffering with a sore throat. Sleep then overtook the tired convicts and silence that Sing Sing has not enjoyed for 70 hours reigned. AN ENGINEERING FEAT.

Building a Railroad Across the Ice and Against Time.

Along the Copper river vailey lies a standard gauge railroad, 191 miles in length, the building of which was filled with romance. Its construction is regarded as a distinct feat in world's engineering. The road crosses the river between two glaciers (Childs and Miles).

The false work of the bridge was laid on the ice in winter. Men were hired to work night and day. M. J. Heney, the contractor, the man who built another "impossible" road across the mountains from Skagway, and his chief engineer. E. O. Hawkins, conceived the idea of using the rives ice for the bridge scaffolding.

As the spring approached bundreds of men were kept busy every minute of the day and night, for if not completed by the time the ice burst all the work and material would have been lost.

The ice went out, carrying the false work with it, less than an hour after the spike was driven in the connecting span and the work was completed. The bridge cost $1,400,000 - "Alaska an Empire In the Making," by John J. Underwood.

At Sea In a Coffin.

It was the French assassin Lupi who escaped to sea from Oayenne in a colfin. He managed to get some nails, tax and cotton, and one dark night be got into the coffin shed. He selected a fine. stanch and seaworthy coffin and fas tened the lid in order to turn it into a deck, leaving a cockpit sufficient to enable him to crawl in. He calked all the joints as well as he could, and when this work was finished he made a pair of paddles out of two planks. Then he brought out his craft with great precaution. Without much difficulty he reached the water's edge. Si lently and slowly he proceeded in the ope of reaching either Venezy British Gulana, 150 nautical miles distant. Licorice Root.

Very few people, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, have any idea where the familiar licorice root comes from. As a matter of fact, the bulk of it halls from Syria. Here it is gathered and piled into great stacks, where it remains until it is thoroughly dry. It is then-taken to the factory to undergo certain processes. The finished product is used for flavoring confectionery and beer, as well as entering into the makeup of many brands of tobacco. Some idea of the extent of the industry may be gathered when it is stated that on the average 8,000 tons of dry licorice root is shipped from Aleppo annually, while Bagdad yields another 6,000 tons, Autioch 4,000 and Damascus 500 tons.
