WANTED HER TO LEAVE HUSBAND

WEALTHY CHICAGO MAN TRIED TO INDUCE MRS. EATON TO LEAVE ADMIRAL.

Plymouth, Mass., Oct. 22.—A reference to "a wealthy lover in Chicago," who wanted Mrs. Jennie May Eaton to leave her husband, was introduced today by the prosecution as showing a possible motive in the trial of Mrs. Eaton, charged with the murder of her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton.

The evidence was given in the testimony of Mrs. Marshall Bursey of Washington, D. C., who said that eight months before the admiral's death Mrs. Eaton told her of the Chicago man and his proposal.

According to Mrs. Bursey, Mrs. Eaton did not disclose to her the name of the alleged lover but said that he owned much property and had promised to leave it all to her.

Mrs. Eaton told the witness that Admiral Eaton had attacked her several times at night and at one time she awoke to find him injecting medicine into her arm.

Mrs. Eaton, also said according to Mrs. Bursey, that she was going to have the admiral examined by an expert and if he was found to be insane, have him put away.

During her stay in Washington, said Mrs. Eaton, received much mail postmarked Chicago.

Mrs. Sarah R. Ducher, a clerk in the Bureau of Children and Guardians in Washington, said that while calling the attention of the District Court to the case of a child who was not receiving proper attention at an orphanage, Mrs. Eaton asked her to destroy all records in the case, saying that her name was Owens and that she was the grandmother of the child. Later Mrs. Eaton gave several other names and finally admitted she was the wife of a naval officer. The case was finally settled and Mrs. Eaton took the child.

How Mrs. Eaton tried to trail her husband's footsteps by scattering talcum powder on the attic stairs, at the morning session was described by Frank S. Booth, a Rockland optician.

"Mrs. Eaton told me that her husband had tried to poison her," testified Booth. "She said she thought he had hidden poison in the attic and that she had searched for it but could not find any. Then she told me she scattered talcum powder on the steps leading to the attic in the hope of tracing his footprints. Her trap failed."

When Court adjourned for the night many of the women auditors left in automobiles, scores of which surrounded the building all day.

District Attorney Barker said the State probably will rest its case tomorrow after five more witnesses have been examined. The defense expects to occupy three or four days.

Conditions in the Eaton household were described by neighbors at the trial today. Mrs. William Magoun told of a strange preparation which Mrs. Eaton said the admiral had mixed for June, her daughter by a former marriage. The mixture, according to the witness, contained soap, vinegar and either pepper or salt. Mrs. Magoun said she never saw any evidence of insanity in the admiral.

Mrs. Abbe C. Cottrell, who kept house for the Eaton's for a time when Mrs. Eaton was not living with her husband, testified that she had never seen any signs that the admiral was of unsound mind.

My Career

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

My name is Arietta Hope. I consist of 400 pages, with a good deal on a page. I am of two kinds, printed matter and girl. The girl part is heroine and the paper part is book. But since the heroine part is the living half I consider myself Arietta Hope.

My maker is a woman of thirty-five, an age at which one may be expected to have attained to a correct knowledge of her sex. Yet since she did not name me under her own name, but the assumed name of a man, Edgar Harding, she is not only unknown to those who have read me, but unless she is betrayed by certain feminine traits displayed in me she is supposed to be Marceline. When my maker had finished me she sent me the round of publishers through the express companies, so that she did not make herself known to them. However, she requested as an especial favor that they would send her the criticisms of their "readers," these persons being employed to read manuscripts and report to the publisher whether each in their opinion would be a profitable book for them to publish. The publishers usually paid very little attention to my maker's request, though a few did. These criticisms were almost always where the "reader" had made some facetious remark about the story. The first one my maker received was as follows:

"Mr. Harding has written a long story purporting to portray a woman. The author must have written the book with a mirror before him. Whether he has portrayed himself or not is not apparent, but certain it is that he has painted a man in petticoats. Arietta Hope gives every evidence of having been constructed by one of the male sex. I would decline it."

Long after the receipt of the criticism my maker made the acquaintance of this critic and found him to be a young man still in his teens.

My maker, having spent two years upon me, at the same time studying different women from whom she drew certain feminine traits which she instilled into me, was much discouraged. If the representative of a prominent publishing house had mistaken her heroine for a petticoated man, what a dreadful failure she must have made! She put me in a closet and looked me up with the intention of never taking me out again. But some one told her that Dodson & Co. were looking for novels—not of the flashy type, but studies of character—and she decided to submit me to them. So I was sent by express, a letter going by mail begging the firm to give her some idea of the merits and demerits—especially the latter—of the story. The manuscript was returned to her, accompanied by a letter, in which the writer courteously explained to her that more than 90 per cent of the novels published were read by women. Women required stories that showed the feminine touch. Mr. Harding had shown high literary excellence, but he had not succeeded in portraying a woman.

My maker determined that when she sent me out again she would adopt a feminine non de plume. She made a new title page, with Edith Granger on it instead of Edgar Harding, and dispatched me to the Parkington Publishing Company. She was again successful in eliciting a courteous reply, which included the reader's report. It was as follows:

"The author has given a picture of a woman who is sure to antagonize her own sex. Arietta Hope is altogether too feminine for a heroine. In reading about her we would surmise, did we not know to the contrary, that she had been drawn by a man, so many of those volatile traits common to women are found in her—traits that men love to ridicule."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed my maker when she read this. "Then I've jumped from the frying pan into the fire?"

My maker determined upon one more effort, and if that failed she was resolved to burn me. She sent me to Littleton Brothers. Within a few days she received a letter from the firm stating bluntly that they would not care to publish me at their own risk, but if she would pay the cost of publication they would put their imprint on the title page of the book, publishing it as their own.

My maker having all a woman's curiosity, desiring to discover who was right about the book, accepted the conditions. She sent the publishers a check, and they published me. I was a long while getting before the public, but I succeeded in the end. Certain men recommended me because they said I was a man's woman, and certain women spoke well of me because they said I was a woman's woman. This at last gave me a start, and as I pleased both men and women I took in all there was except the children. Anyway, I kept growing and growing in popular favor till I was pronounced what publishers call "phenomenal."

Littleton Brothers were very angry because they must pay a larger royalty than usual, having published me for my author instead of themselves. Nevertheless, they made a fortune out of me, and when congratulated on their foresight they look wise and say nothing. I am now in my fourth hundred thousand, and the demand for me continues. My maker has built a country place, where she has retired, spending much of her time in declining requests of publishers that she write for them.

ALLEGED FORGER IN THE TOILS

E. J. BLOUNT TAKEN IN CUSTODY BY THE GREENVILLE POLICE.

E. J. Blount, colored, wanted by the Craven county authorities on a charge of forgery, was placed under arrest yesterday morning at Greenville. Immediately after being notified of the arrest Sheriff R. B. Lane sent Deputy Sheriff J. W. Huff to that city to take the prisoner in charge, and he will be brought back to New Bern this morning.

The forgery which Blount is alleged to have committed was committed several months ago. Blount was apprehended at Wilmington and brought back to this city and placed in jail. After being given a preliminary hearing and being bound over to superior court he succeeded in giving bond for his appearance and was released from custody. When court convened he was not to be found and since that time Sheriff Lane has been making a search for him.

ENJOYABLE PARTY LAST NIGHT

EPWORTH LEAGUE OF CENTENARY METHODIST CHURCH MAKE MERRY.

The Halloween Party given by the Epworth League of Centenary Methodist church was attended by every member of the league and many of their friends and the event was one of the most enjoyable of the season.

The league members and the visitors first assembled in the league rooms where an entertaining program prepared by Miss Caritta Wallace and which consisted of vocal and instrumental and vocal selections were rendered.

At the conclusion of the program the guests repaired to the church parlors where delightful refreshments were served. The scene in the parlors was indeed a pleasing one. The shaded lights cast a glow over a scene which could not be put one in mind of the Halloween season. Witches were there to tell the fortunes of the merry-makers and numerous games were indulged in before the evening came to a close.
