BEST OF PURIFYING AGENTS

Charcoal and Quicklime Are Nature's Remedy—How to Get Most Lasting Results.

Charcoal and quicklime are the best known purifiers. The best plan for utilizing charcoal in the food closet or in the cellar bins where fruits or vegetables are kept is to suspend it in a net bag. Any coarse open net will do. Make a number of bags sufficiently large to hold several large lumps of charcoal. Do not powder the charcoal, but fill the bags with the lumps, and after they have had an opportunity to display their marvelous power to absorb all sorts of bad smells and mustiness, and leave the atmosphere pure and sweet, their usefulness will not be over. Remember that the power of charcoal to serve its purifying purposes is proportioned to its freshness, and the freshening process is restored by heating. At least once a week take the charcoal bags down, empty them in a fire pot kept for the purpose and heat the charcoal very hot. The freshened lumps may then be restored to the net bags and serve a new period of usefulness.

Boxes of lime and jars of plaster are very effective in absorbing dampness, but their useful properties are not fully secured unless these disinfecting and purifying absorbents can be placed in the best form to be effective and easily handled. In the form of a pad with the layers of lime or plaster or a combination of each evenly distributed, their absorbent qualities will be more than doubled.

WOMEN'S BANK MEETS WANT

London Institution, Run By and For the One Sex, Has Proved a Success.

The possibilities of banking as a career for women have been demonstrated by Farrow's Bank for Women, which was inaugurated a couple of years ago in London, and which, managed entirely by women, proved so successful that it was recently moved to new and enlarged quarters.

The bank's success, in the opinion of Mrs. Kate Kelly, the manager, is largely due to the hearty support it has received from women.

"The eagerness with which women of all classes and from all parts of the empire took up the idea of an institution devoted entirely to their needs was in itself a proof that Farrow's novel departure was fulfilling a long-felt want," Mrs. Kelly said.

"Our bank gives women the privilege of consulting one of their own sex about their business affairs."

"The business transacted here is the same as that transacted by any other joint stock bank, and the fact that all our staff consists of women is good evidence that one sex is not more gifted than the other in accuracy and a head for figures."

"A feature of our establishment here is a rendezvous room for our clients, where they can meet their friends and write letters."

Model Farm Colony.
The Brazilian "Jornal do Commercio" announces that the minister of finance of the state of Parana has received from the Brazil Railway company a report of the development of the fazenda at Carambahi, on the railway north of Ponta Grossa, which was acquired by the company to demonstrate the possibility of growing wheat, the latest modern machinery being imported therefor. Eighty houses have been built for colonists, and so far fourteen families have been established in them. The fazenda possesses pedigree stock, Swiss bulls of pure race having been imported, and includes a dairy fitted with most modern appliances, also from Switzerland, for making butter and cheese. An agricultural expert is on the fazenda for the purpose of instructing the colonists. An arrangement has been made for introducing colonists from Holland, and already 400 pounds of Dutch cheese are produced weekly, finding a market in Curitiba, Ponta Grossa and Sao Paulo.

Turkish Women's Strong Point.
Turkish women are said to have one accomplishment in which they excel the women of all other nationalities. They know how to sit. Hester Donaldson Jenkins calls attention to the fact that the Turkish verb to sit is used where occidentals would use to live, or stay, or visit. To the question, "Where are you living?" one gets the reply, "I am sitting in Stamboul." Or, to the question, "Are you married?" the answer will be "No, I am sitting at home." And when they sit they sit quietly, "in the perfect repose of a sleeping cat." They don't have to keep their hands busy. They crochet or knit. They just sit.

Nogi's Nerve Tonic.
Having been dedicated to the profession of arms, General Nogai was taken, while still a small boy, to see a criminal decapitated, and was rebuked for shuddering at the spectacle. After nightfall, when all was darkness and silent, he was required to go alone to the burial-ground and bring back the culprit's head. The ordeal was designed to strengthen his nerves, and teach him to fear nothing, living or dead.—Francis E. Loupp, in the Atlantic.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Mr. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good.

I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it."

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlastingly tired feeling?

TWO SIDES TO CASE

Does All New England Demand High Protective Tariff?

Rather Hard for the Average Person to See How It Has Greatly Benefited Workers, According to Recent Happenings.

Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire arose in his place the other day and with impassioned eloquence declared that New England demands a high protective tariff—the Aldrich tariff, for choice. After saying this at much length and in many different ways as he could phrase it, the senator from New Hampshire sat down, apparently thinking the matter all settled. What New England wanted, that she must have.

Passing the vicious idea that New England or any other section of country has a right to be supported at national expense, the Journal challenges Mr. Gallinger's first proposition. The Journal has yet to see convincing evidence that the people of New England are in love with the Aldrich tariff. Magnates who have been drawing 66 per cent. annual dividends on mill stock doubtless think that tariff a masterpiece of statesmanship; but what about the people whose work and wages help to pay those dividends?

What of the Lawrence strikers—95 per cent. of them foreign born and imported free of duty—who had to fight for months to get their wages raised to a living rate, and who found the whole force of a tariff-controlled local government turned against them? Are they such enthusiastic advocates of "protection"?

What of New England cotton mill workers, with an average wage of $4.55 per year? Are they champions of the Aldrich schedule?

What of New England woolen mill workers, who sell their labor in a free trade market for an average wage of $4.44 per year, and who buy woolen goods—at all—in a market "protected" by a tariff graft averaging about 100 per cent? Do they swear by the present tariff, or swear at it?—Chicago Journal.

Not a Tax Against New York.
Whatever basis of justice there is to Senator Root's plea for reducing the income tax from $4,000 to $1,000, his argument is not strengthened by his charge that the bill in effect is legislation by the south and west against the east.

No doubt an exemption of only $1,000 would "tend to perpetuate patriotism and loyalty to the government by requiring a slight sacrifice in return for citizenship." But only in a figurative sense is it true that the measure in its existing form thrusts the burden of taxation on a few eastern states. The great fortunes of New York are not New York's fortunes in the meaning that they are the accumulations of New York commerce and New York industry. They are national fortunes, the sources of which are the mines and mills and oil wells and railways as well as the cotton and wheat fields of other states. The Rockefeller and Carnegie and Frick fortunes were not amassed in New York, and of thousands of lesser fortunes it is equally true that they are New York fortunes only in the sense that this city has become their place of distribution by the preference of their possessors for residence here.

Taxing incomes from such accumulations is not discriminatory merely because the tax is paid in New York or Boston. It is equitable tax on wealth the origin of which in the aggregate is national, and as such property subject to taxation for national use.—New York World (Dem.).

Merchant Marine.
A subscriber takes exception to the Journal's editorial on "The Sad Shipping Trust," and remarks:

"It will be of interest to many of your readers to have your ideas as to how the American merchant marine may be successfully developed."

In the Journal's opinion, the chief need of the American merchant marine is fair play and a chance to grow. The tariff levies toll on materials used in ship building; which adds to the cost of American-built vessels. Foreign built ships, with few exceptions, are denied American registry. At the same time, tariff bounties have turned the attention of American capital to manufacturing, rather than to foreign commerce.—Chicago Journal.

Narrowness of Many of Place.
Doubtless there are many democratic senators who would be glad to see the tariff bill changed in some particulars, but they have taken a broad view of the subject and have seen that in no other way than by compromise among local interests could an act be passed which would measure up to the promises which the party made.

Real Leader of Party.
Woodrow Wilson is not the boss, but the real leader of his party. It is no slavish deference that leads Democrats, whether in or out of congress, to want to know his views. What we have is the recognition of the powerful, but wholly legitimate influence of the new Democratic leader, the willingness, and even eagerness, on the part of Democrats to accept such leadership — are most encouraging signs. Mr. Wilson, too, has shown an ability to bring things to pass—and that without friction.
