

CHECK FLASHER IS IN THE TOILS

Passer Of Worthless Paper Is Nabbed In The Capital City.

WAS COMING TO NEW BERN Taken Back To Columbia, S. C. To Answer To Charges.

Securely handcuffed to the Burns detective who came to this city after him, Addison P. Jones, the Baltimore man arrested by Officer Glenn for giving a worthless check to two Raleigh banks, was yesterday taken to Columbia, S. C., and will be turned over to the police authorities of that city for check flashing.

The detective says there is no possible chance for him to escape a prison sentence in Columbia, but if he is released Jones will be immediately re-arrested and taken to Washington, N. C., for trial upon similar charges. Then there will be still several cities where he is wanted.

The first notice of his operations and the indirect cause of his arrest in Raleigh, was received from Washington, N. C., where he secured about $50 from one of the banks of that place. The Washington bankers notified the Raleigh banks and Mr. Mayo from Washington identified the man under arrest as the same one wanted there. It was then that he confessed to Chief of Police Walters.

In Columbia the flasher had no trouble in getting acquainted with the bank officials and a letter was found among his possessions from the president of the Palmetto Bank thanking him for his deposit. In that city and also in Washington Jones went by the name of "A. J. Montague."

In his confession Jones stated that his last visit before coming to Raleigh was at Southern Pines, but didn't do any check flashing there because Shaffer instructed him to proceed to Raleigh. From Raleigh he was going to New Bern.

Jones also told the police that he had instruction that his partner or boss would be in Raleigh Friday and would meet him at the Hotel Bland at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and upon this confession the police requested the newspapers to withhold publications in order that Shaffer would not get wise. A description of Shaffer was given the police and a strict watch kept on the hotels, but Chief of Police Walters said last night that the publication of the story in the afternoon paper gave the other Dan a chance to get away. He saw the account of Jones' arrest and made himself scarce. The police are firm in their belief that they would have landed him if the story had been kept secret.

A search among his possessions yesterday revealed a marriage certificate of the marriage of Mr. Addison P. Jones to Miss Bessie Brown in Baltimore, on April 12, 1913, and also a letter he wrote to his wife. These two pieces of evidence convince the police that Jones has confessed the truth.

A complete traveler's printing outfit was found in his suitcase, and it is the belief of the police that he used this in writing out his checks. All of them were written apparently on typewriter ink. One of his checks was written for him by the public stenographer at the Yarrowburgh House. A check for $70 and drawn on the First National Bank of Chester, Pa., was also among his possessions. He had only $3 in cash when arrested, and an overcoat valued at $100.

There is enough evidence to convict him at each place. The detective stated yesterday that he was been trailing Jones for two weeks from city to city, first beginning work in Philadelphia, where he was traced to a cafe, in which he first met the woman in the case. He was then traced to the railroad station and thence degree by degree, to the various cities where he did his work. The detective had just arrived in Columbia, when the American Bankers' Association sent him to Raleigh.

The detective said that the bankers and police department of this city are to be complimented for their prompt work in notifying the proper authorities of the man's arrest, for it was due to their action and assistance that he was able to get in such close touch to the man wanted. If all the bankers and police in other cities are as prompt to report check flashers such business would always be stopped before the flashing business could get much headway, he stated.—Raleigh News and Observer, Nov. 23

FOR THE YOUNG LADY

DAINTY MODELS IN PLENTY MARK THE SEASON.

Ingenue Has Been as Well Taken Care of as Her Elders—Checked and Plaid Materials Are Both Popular.

Unfortunately in our country too many young girls are dressed according to their whims rather than according to the canons of good taste, and too many mothers are weakly indulgent rather than wisely authoritative in this matter of dress for their daughters. The fault is not so common as it once was. Standards are better.

With a tailored coat and skirt there should go at least one pretty, dark blouse matching the suit, and these little dark blouses of silk or chiffon are often brightened up by a bit of colored embroidery or white lace frills.

One or two waists of fine lingerie, silk or cotton crepe may be added to the list, and perhaps an additional waist or two of the fine light wash flannels may be useful for outing wear. There are many one-piece simple frocks being made up for young girls' wear in serge, silk, poplin, cashmere and other light wools which are practical and attractive, and inexpensive little afternoon and dinner frocks are made up on much the same lines, but with a touch of more festive color or detail.

The coat and skirt of the moment are lengthened at the back, the fronts being cut away in shaped or rounded effects, and are either semi-fitted or on the youthful Russian lines.

An attractive street frock is of dark blue wool poplin. The jacket has long shawl revers which fasten at the waistline by a single large button. A small shaped collar of velvet falls over the shawl collar at the shoulder and back, the body of the jacket has a peplum attached at the sides and back, under the attached belt of the material.

Another extremely girlish model is made of corduroy trimmed with braid, buttons and has a black collar.

Very smart checked and plaid materials are combined with plain ma-materials for young girls' wear, and often one sees one-piece frocks of plain material with plaid trimmings.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Pretty Leghorn hats are trimmed with bright colored roses well down on the hat brim.

Gumpes for frocks and blouses are often of shadow laces in white and coral as well as fine nets.

Meteor moires, broche charmeuses, pompadour foulards and broche crepes are used for lovely frocks.

Bright colored handkerchiefs—French and Irish—remain one of the vogue for the new art combinations and designs.

Long sleeves and low necks are some of the contradictory yet frequently seen things in feminine blouses for summer wear.

Cotton fabrics of soft, thick pile and beautiful colorings are to be had for wraps. Some shops call them cotton velvets.

The newest separate blouses are designed with yokes. The parts of these waists are generously full back and front.

Futurist Lingerie.

A sheer fine cotton fabric with a border design in vivid futurist colors is being used for undersgarments. Coquettish chemises are fashioned of it, and they have ribbon, shoulder straps matching a color in the border. There are also dainty little petticoats of the material.

WILSON'S WIFE AIDS IN FIGHT

STANDS UP FOR HUSBAND ACCUSED OF CRIMINAL ASSAULT.

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 26.—Furthering his defense charging compliance on the part of Miss Kate Turner the lawyers for Graham Wilson, the rich young farmer charged with criminal assault on Miss Turner, the penalty for which is death in this State, placed his wife on the witness stand today.

Although Wilson's defense is a practical admission of infidelity, his wife has been firmly on his side since the accusations were first made. She testified today to having seen Miss Turner shortly after the alleged assault and that she did not appear to be excited or hysterical. On the way to her home in Charles Town with Wilson driving and Wilson's sister in the carriage, Miss Lavallotte Wilson, they stopped at the home of Mrs. George Marlow, Mrs. Marlow, her daughter, Miss Virginia, and Mrs. Sarah Colbert all testified that Miss Turner did not appear distraught or perturbed.

Miss Eliza Timberlake, a sister-in-law of Wilson, swore that Miss Turner told her on the day of Wilson's arrest that she had caused his arrest because if she did not she might be "considered to have been a party to the affair."

More important perhaps, was the testimony given by Dr. W. P. McGuire of Winchester, brother of the late Dr. Hunter McGuire, who attended Stonewall Jackson in his last hours, and Dr. Louis M. Allen of Winchester, and Dr. Clifford Sparrow of Martinsburg. Whereas the physicians who examined Miss Turner said that the discolorations of bruises did not appear on her body until more than a week after the assault, they contended that this was natural. The defense's doctors today agreed that the bruises must have shown themselves within three days at most.

Miss Lucy Arthur, of Morehead City, was among the visitors in the city last evening. She was enroute to Norfolk, Va., for a short visit.

Miss Edna Irving, of Morehead City, arrived in the city last evening for a short visit.

Mrs. Bessie Carman and Miss Mollie Heath, teachers in the New Bern High School left yesterday for Raleigh to attend a teachers' assembly to be held in that city tomorrow.

Mrs. Edward Martin, of Beaufort, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Kafer on National avenue.
