Captain Pembroke and Mr. Effingham
By JULIUS MORIDE

Captain George Pembroke, of the royal engineers, when there were British troops stationed in Canada, wrote his fiancée that he was ordered home to England. The lady, Emily Collins, who was a New Yorker, was some what surprised at a request made in the letter that she should sail from that city, meet him in London and marry him there. Miss Collins would have considered this an impertinence, but, reading further, saw that the order was imperative that the officer report at once, and, since a steamer sailed from Montreal the evening he received it, he would sail with her.
Now, this was all a tissue of deception. Pembroke, ten years before a young lieutenant, had met Miss Collins, a girl of seventeen, in England, had flirted with her, but the two had drifted apart. After he came to Canada he opened a correspondence with her that led to an engagement. Instead of sailing from Montreal he purposed going across from New York and in the same steamer as his fiancée. Having grown ten years older and raised a full beard, he did not believe she would recognize him. He would endeavor to win her under another name, then confess that he was Pembroke himself.
This was a pretty scheme—that is, if he succeeded in winning the girl away from himself.
When the ship sailed in which Miss Collins was to go to England, Captain Pembroke in mufti, under the name of Guy Effingham, was on board. He was a handsome fellow, of an aristocratic bearing and quite a lady killer. He did not recognize Miss Collins, who had considerably changed, but succeeded in securing some one to point her out to him. An introduction was secured, and the captain and his fiancée were soon sitting next each other on deck in steamer chairs engaged in a desperate flirtation.
The word flirtation is generally used in connection with women, and we do not associate it with persons on the lee side of middle age. But both Pembroke and Miss Collins were flirts.
The night before reaching port while steaming up the channel the captain gave Miss Collins a fictitious account of himself, stating that he was related to a duke; that he had an income of $8,000 a year and was going home to stand for parliament.
Having thus prepared the way, he told her that the moment he saw her on the day they sailed he knew that she was destined to have a marked effect upon his subsequent life and he had since realized that he was madly in love with her. Then he offered her his heart and hand. She hid her face on his bosom and whispered "Yes."
Pembroke was shocked. It was not that he had won the lady from himself, but that she should show so little sense of honor in thus deserting one man for another. He expected that she would say something about complications with another lover, but she maintained silence on the subject, and he could see no evidence of the slightest qualm of conscience at her dishonorable conduct.
Pembroke, of course, knew where he could find Miss Collins in London, but he asked for her address and when he received it put it carefully in his pocketbook. When they separated it was understood that he should call the evening of his arrival. The final parting took place on the upper deck behind a great wind funnel, where there was no one to see. So exuberant was the caress he received that he went away as delighted with his success as Guy Effingham as he was enraged at the treatment of George Pembroke.
"You'll not disappoint me tomorrow evening," she said, "will you?"
"Certainly not. Why do you doubt me?"
"You men are so uncertain. I have known you only ten days. It seems that my happiness is too intense to be real. I must be dreaming."
"I assure you mine surpasses it."
"Well, then, goodby. I shall expect you early."
Miss Collins was to go to London with her people, while Pembroke went alone. On the way it seemed to him that he had been caught in a whirlwind that had turned him not only completely round, but upside down. What should he do? Accept the slight put upon him as Pembroke, and give way to the ecstasy experienced by Effingham, or, as Pembroke, burl back the love she had lavished on Effingham. He was not quite sure whether he was a jilted or an accepted lover.
When he went to see her in London he had not made up his mind what course he would pursue. When she advanced to receive him his heart fluttered. Throwing her arms about him, she looked up into his face with a glad smile and said:
"Oh, George, dearest George, how happy I am to be with you again!"
"George?"
"Yes, George."
"You know?"
"Your personating another to win me again was just too lovely for anything."
"But—how did you know?"
"Stupid! I recognized you long before you saw me at all."
"Well, well, what a donkey I have been! Do you know I've been half-crazy as myself and in the seventh heaven as the other fellow."
"And just think, I have been loved by two different men at the same time. It was delicious!"

TOY TO PLEASE THE BABY
Amusing Little Tricket That Will Keep the Little One Amused for Many Hours.

Bright colors, and anything that shines upon being shaken, always appeals to quite a small baby and we give a sketch of a little toy that was a great success, and was made with the aid of a silver bangle, some brightly colored remnants of ribbon, and some little bells. Suitable little bells, should we not already possess them, may be purchased for a trifle at any toy shop, and those of the nature that are so often seen upon a cat's collar or upon children's reins are preferable to the best to procure.

Each bell is attached to a small loop of narrow ribbon, the ends of which are tied tightly on to the bangle in a neat little bow.
A glance at the sketch will explain all this, and all the bells should be tied on to one side of the bangle so that baby may clutch the other side in his little hand and shake it as vigorously as he pleases. Ribbon of a good kind with fast dye, and the brightest possible reds, blues, yellows and greens, should be selected for the making of this little toy, and if the bangle is brightly polished also it will make it doubly attractive to baby.

WIDE CHOICE IN BUTTONS
Odd Shapes and Colorings Have Been Designed to Suit the Costumes Now Worn.

The new buttons are in odd shapes and colorings. Squares, hexagons, pyramid effects, barrel, platter, olive, bathtub and pear shapes are the novelties. Besides these unusual shapes, there are still the ball and half ball buttons.
Some very striking novelties are in black glass or crystal with mosaic designs in Chinese colorings. These unusual effects are accomplished by means of carving, and by painting the designs underneath the crystal. Dainty floral designs are done the same way. These Chinese colorings are even more strikingly emphasized in the semball buttons, some of which are half one color and half another, while others are divided into as many as four sections, each of which is in a different color. Rich burnt orange tones are frequently used.
Some handsome porcelain buttons are painted in Persian and mosaic effects. Among the extremely new effects in porcelain and crystal are the fruit buttons in realistic shapes and colorings. Apples, pears, cherries, etc., are so perfectly designed as to render them readily recognizable.

KEEPING CLEAR OF STAINS
Water into Which Peeled Potatoes Have Been Cooked Is One of the Most Effective Helps.

Isn't it annoying to find that a spot of grease or a fruit stain has been dropped on the front of a new blouse or dress? On silks and delicate scarfs these marks can generally be removed by this simple method, which I don't suppose you've heard of before. Grate two large peeled potatoes into a basin of cold water, and at the end of half an hour strain and put the potatoes into another bowl of water. Then when the sediment has quite settled, rub or sponge the affected part with the liquor.
Grease spots should be treated with a paste made with fullers' earth mixed with two-thirds of water and one-third of ammonia. Placing blotting paper under the stain, spread the paste on thickly, and leave for 24 hours, then brush it off.
Crepe Handkerchiefs.
Little hemstitched crepe de chine handkerchiefs are a Paris novelty. They are made of a very fine quality of the crepe and come in vividly gay plain colors or in the misty flowered crepes much in vogue.
"These gay handkerchiefs are especially attractive with a dark walking suit, as when drawn from cuff, pocket or muff they give a pleasing touch of color to the costume," says a woman back from Paris with a supply of them in many colors. "Tucked into the breast pocket of a tailored coat with just corners showing, either standing up stiffly like rabbit's ears or drawn down over the pocket edge like flower petals, a gay handkerchief will give a chic finishing adornment and that little startling dash of contrasting color now the fashion."

Embroidered Hosiery.
Embroidered hosiery, often having lace insets, is being used more extensively than it has for many years. Small, self-embroidered figures seem to be preferred—the startling snakes, mice and spiders no more are seen.
But the stocking that matches the gown is quite the thing, and as there is a wider use of colors in woman's outer apparel there is also an increased variety in colors of women's hosiery.
