PLYMPIC PASSENGERS DESCRIBE BOAT SINKING.

London, Nov. 14.—Passengers on the Olympic today gave the following description of the sinking of the dreadnaught Audacious: "Tuedsay morning, after breakfast, we saw the British Dreadnaught flying signals that she was sinking and ordered us to stand by. Waves were braking over her decks but the whole crew of nine hundred men were standing at their post without a sign of flurry though the water was washing their feet. All of our boats were launched and all but two hundred fo the men were removed. Meanwhile we attempted to run a cable to the Audacious but this parted under the strain. An entire day was spent in attempting this and when they had been warned that magazines might explode, two hundred men left on board were taken off. The Olympic was ordered to go to Lough Lilly on the coast of Ireland. Scarcely had we gotton under way when we heard a great explosion and a lurid light lit the sky. It was plain that one of the finest ships of the British navy had blown up and sunk. Not a single life was lost."

Primrose And Wilson Here Tuesday Night.

"The ministrel show was built up from the historic "first part," the 89.08 famed semi-circle, with bones and tamborine at the ends,"says George 85.10 Primrose, the famous ministrels star, who is again appearing with his old partner, George Wilson in a big production of 20th Century minstrelsy. "This was found in the first real minstrel show, and has continued down to the present day, although instead of two end men we now have twelve. 247.48 But the old-time company had but one "Bones" and one "tambo," as he was sometimes addressed by the interlocutor or middleman. The old mnistrels were fertile of songs that lingered in the memory. Whitlock, the originator of negro minstrelsy may be forgotten, but how many of the older generation have forgotten his Lucy Long," or "Mary Blaine."

LOOKOUT, YOUNGSTERS.

The Officers Instructed To Arrest Skaters.

At a meeting of the Board of Aldermen several months ago, the ordinance as to the age limit of children skating on the side walk was amended, and the age fixed at ten years. The ordinance also prohibits skating on the streets in the bus iness section of the city.

This ordinance has not been stri ly enforced in the past, but those who have been violating it should take warning, for the officers have been instructed to see that no person over ten years of age goes on the sidewalk wearing akates.
