

RESPECT FOR THE LAW

(Charlotte, Observer)
Nothing else in the proceedings of the annual convention of the North Carolina Press Association at Cleveland Springs, last week, was quite so important as the action taken in adoption of a clear-cut, ringing resolution pledging the editors to use their influence towards bringing about a greater degree of respect for law and order and to support the authorities in its enforcement. During the convention, in the lobby and on the veranda, there was discussion among the newspaper men of the deplorable laxness on the part of a large proportion of our people in the matter of the respect for the law, and the sentiment of the members of the Association seems to have been expressed by Editor J. F. Harley, of The Salisbury Post, who advanced the idea that the editors of the State could serve the Commonwealth during the next year in no more important way than to unite in a sort of campaign to arouse public sentiment to a recognition of the supreme importance of respect for law and to support of the authorities in its enforcement.

When the resolution was read by Editor Sanford Martin, of the Winston-Salem Journal, member of the resolution committee, it was adopted by a strong chorus of "ayes" and not a dissenting voice was heard, of course. This resolution, which was adopted just before Governor Morrison delivered his address in which he frequently sounded the refrain, "The law must be supreme," synthesized and harmonized impressively with the Governor's appeal. The resolution follows:

"Justice and equality before the law is a cardinal principle of a democracy, and it must follow that respect for and obedience to law is vital to the perpetuity of a republic. At this time, when lawlessness does much toward, when the law is evaded and defied and respect for constituted authority is noticeably lessened, we, the editors of North Carolina, in convention assembled, do pledge ourselves to at all times insist upon the enforcement, not only, but we will cooperate with and uphold the law officers in the performance of their duty; that we will insist that the guilty shall be punished regardless of wealth, influence or social position; and that we will use our best efforts at all times to build up a sentiment that will respect the law as law and that will make any evasion or violation of the law odious."

Coming immediately upon the adoption of the resolution, the Governor's address itself rang in harmony with the sentiments just expressed by the editors like the refrain of a song, as with force and eloquence he sounded, as the Statesville Daily Express it, "one clear note which all good citizens applaud. Over and over again he emphasized 'The Supremacy of the Law.' Enforce the law with justice and impartiality but with might. Nine-tenths of all our ills are due to lawlessness, to failure to enforce, to compel at all times recognition of the majesty of the law, declared the Governor."

There can be no difference of opinion among good citizens on this matter as the Statesville paper remarks; it is not debatable. And it is the glory of the Governor and of the state that his are no empty words as to the supremacy of the law. He has been tested and stood firm. His earnestness and zeal in maintaining law and order cannot be questioned. However we may differ with him in other matters, the present Executive's stand for the supremacy of the law at a time when authority is questioned, and law is defied, will be one of the brightest chapters in the history of his Administration."

It argues well for the State that the Governor and the editors are in accord in the common declaration that the law must be respected and its supremacy recognized, the Chief Executive pledged to law enforcement and the press of the State pledged to the support of all authorities in the enforcement of the law.

ITS AMAZING

It is amazing how much one may learn about so common a thing as a kitchen range. One gets this feeling to the fullest extent while listening to the factory expert, located at the store of the Standard Hardware all next week, as he explains the manufacture and use of the Great Majestic Range. To encourage callers to buy a Majestic Range during the week of the demonstration each purchaser is given his choice of two fine sets of cooking utensils absolutely free with each range. 7c1

STATE FAIR REPRESENTS WHOLE OF NORTH CAROLINA.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 7.—The effort to make the sixty-first annual North Carolina State Fair on October 16-20 representative of the entire State of North Carolina is receiving the personal attention of Mrs. Edith Vanderbilt, president of the fair.

No pains are being spared to make the representation apply to attendance as well as to exhibits that will be on display. Aside from the exhibits, the horse racing and other amusements at the fair, the annual football game between the University of North Carolina and the North Carolina State College in itself draws thousands of visitors to Raleigh during Fair Week, most of whom stay over for two or three days in order to properly take in the fair.

So, what is of most concern to fair officials is not getting the crowds here but making them feel at home after they come. Profiting by her experience of last year, Mrs. Vanderbilt has personally interested herself in the beautification of the buildings and grounds and improvement of sanitary conditions.

The management is also endeavoring to make visitors feel more at home by incorporating as far as possible the features that have made community fairs successful in so many places. The main attraction about a fair to some people is that it affords an opportunity to meet acquaintances. Every attention will be paid to that type of person. The grounds and buildings have been made more commodious, more entrances have been provided and the comfort of visitors is being emphasized in all arrangements, which include greatly improved eating places.

Special attention is being paid to the attractions that accompany the fair. In addition to a large list of free attractions by trained experts, there will be a number of features in which visitors themselves can participate. The horse show and the dog show are two innovations while community singing and the singing of folk songs will also be featured. A unique competition has already been arranged by the Raleigh Evening Times, the newspaper having offered a prize for the most frolicked boy in North Carolina. The management is desirous of arranging other contests of a similar nature.

AMERICAN COURT IN CHINA RESUMES WORK

SHANGHAI, Aug. 9.—Machinery of the United States Court for China, idle for nearly a year through which Judge C. S. Lobingier of the court was absent in the United States, was set in motion the latter part of July on the return of the judge.

In the spring of 1921, charges were filed against Judge Lobingier by W. S. Fleming, senior member of a prominent firm of Shanghai attorneys, with the State Department at Washington and after a protracted hearing which Judge Lobingier attended at Washington he was completely exonerated in an order issued by President Harding.

Due to peculiarities of existing laws it was held that no other American Federal judge be appointed to take Judge Lobingier's place through the period of his absence.

CANADIAN AGRICULTURAL WEALTH IS THREE BILLIONS

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 6.—Agricultural wealth of the Canadian provinces west of the Great Lakes comprising Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia is set at $93,238,672,500 by a recent estimate of the government Bureau of Statistics in an estimated total for all Canada of $6,831,022,000.

Saskatchewan in 1900 raised only 8 per cent of the total Canadian wheat production, but now is given an agricultural wealth estimate of $1,513,156,000, or $374,000,000 below that of Ontario, whose agricultural history dates back several centuries.

"With the three prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta credited with nearly $3,000,000 in agricultural wealth and with 30,000,000 acres of good land still unfilled with the area of settlement, the outlook is bright," says the government report.
