RURAL COMPETITION

Rural competition has changed a great deal, just as has life on the farm, in the past fifty years. Once the champion with the scythe, the wheat cradle, the ax or the husking peg was cock of the walk and a big man in the community. Machines now play a much greater part in getting the farm work done, so the farmer has fallen in line and has become a good machinist. Few of them, perhaps, will regret the changed conditions that have made them so.

But rural competition still exists and, although changed, is as ever so strong. The fine results of this competition are evident everywhere in the land. Competition among growers has developed the sheep and swine of the modern farms and has brought to the county its remarkable development of high-grade cattle. Boys corn and pig clubs are live competitors with their elders. The best yield of wheat, oats or corn in the community gives just as much pride to the farmers whose hard work produced it as ever.

Rural competition has merely changed outwardly, just as the country has changed. It is still as much a part of the national life as ever and yields every bit as good results as it did a half century ago.
