The University Abroad.

There is a letter in a recent number of the North Carolina Presbyterian written by Dr. Hoge, of Wilmington, who is travelling with Dr. Alderman. Describing a celebration of Washington's birthday on the Steamer "Aller," he says:—

"Notwithstanding the fatigue of the day, we had an enthusiastic celebration of Washington's birthday in the saloon at night. Dr. Alderman represented the South and fairly captured the assembly. For elegance of manner, chastness of diction, and beauty of thought, I have never heard an address of the same length that equalled it. One man said he had bought timber lands in North Carolina and now had more confidence in his investment, while congratulations kept up all the next day. North Carolina stock was above par, and North Carolinians were in high feathers."

Will Work For Vanderbilt.

Mr. George Vanderbilt has directed his forester to have taken and mounted specimens of the birds and animals found on the Biltmore estate. Mr. T. G. Pearson, Assistant Curator of the Biological Museum of the University, has been employed to do the work in taxidermy.

SEWANEE LETTER.

SEWANEE, TENN.,

Mar. 25, 1898.

The new scholastic year at Sewanee has just begun. As the larger part of our students come from the South, the founders of the University thought it best to begin the year's work in March and end it in the fall, thus giving the students the benefit of the cool mountain air in the summer and allowing them to spend their vacation at home in what is usually the pleasantest and healthiest time of the year. All the students have not yet returned, but judging from the number that has already come, compared with those present at the same time last year, the prospect for an unusually prosperous season is most flattering. The fact also that a large proportion of the new students here has come from other colleges shows that the peculiar advantages which Sewanee has to offer are becoming known and appreciated.

One of the most prominent of these is J. G. Jayne B. A., of Princeton, famous in the athletic world as "Lady Jayne", Princeton's star pitcher of '97. Having finished his academic course at Princeton, he has now entered the Law Department of the University of the South, and will no doubt be of great assistance to us in training the Base Ball and Foot Ball teams of '98.

On last Saturday night a mass meeting of the students, presided over by Mr. N. G. Johnston, was held at which resolutions were passed in regard to the death of Mr. Louis Allen, of South Carolina, and the Rt. Rev. C. Quintard, D. D. LL. D., Bishop of Tennessee and second founder of the University. After this the Cuban situation was warmly discussed and a telegram of some length sent President McKinley, commending his past course but urging him to action and assuring him of Sewanee's loyal sympathy and support.

During the winter arrangements were perfected by which the University came into the possession of the magnificent hotel at Bridgeport, Ala., valued at some $50000. The furniture and material of the building will be shipped to Sewanee and used in the erection of a large dormitory for Junior students. Work has been begun and already several carloads of furniture have arrived. The dormitory will be constructed according to the latest and most approved plans and will materially add to the advantages of Sewanee student life.

The Base Ball candidates have begun practicing and, in the opinion of many, Sewanee's team of '98 will be by far the best in her history. An especially good feature is the abundance of pitching material, for the lack of which Sewanee has at times suffered. Mr. J. N. Selden will both captain and manage the team with Mr. J. H. Brown as ass't. manager. Nearly all of last year's players have returned and there are several experienced candidates who have played on teams of other colleges.

Rev. W. A. Guerry, M.A. B.D., was called during the winter to the rectorship of St. Luke's Church, Atlanta; Grace Church Charleston; and Christ Church Cathedral, New Orleans. He has decided, however, to retain his present position as chaplain of the University.

Rt. Rev. Thos. F. Gailor, D.D., present Bishop of Tennessee and at one time Vice Chancellor of the University of the South, has been invited to deliver the commencement sermon at the University of Alabama this summer.

The course of lectures which has always formed an important part of the summer program, promises to be of special interest this year, and from all indications the number of visitors to the mountain will be unusually large.

The "Literary Magazine" will continue under the management of the "Chelidon", edited by Mr. M. G. Johnston; Prof. Trent will edit the "Review"; and Mr. R. W. Hogue will be the new editor-in-chief of the "Purple", the first copy of which will appear about April 9th.

THE SEWANEE PURPLE.

University Dramatic Club.

Upon the advent of Easter the Dramatic Club will once more embark upon the Thespian sea and their waves of histrionic talent will, no doubt, bear them on to success.

The club leaves Chapel Hill Saturday, April 9th, going to Winston, where it will give a performance Easter Monday night; then to Greensboro, Reidsville and Danville, Va., respectively.

The play, as has been stated before in the "TAR HEEL," is a roaring farce-comedy, entitled "A Modern Ananias," by Jno. A. Fraser, Jr., a talented playwright.

The play, unlike most productions of the kind, contains a well-conceived plot, which is intensely ludicrous from beginning to end. There is no distinctive star-part, the lines being fairly equally distributed, but our only and inimitable Cox, by his exceedingly clever and uproariously funny delineation of a two hundred pound, forty-seven year old female, whose soubriquet is "Baby," represents the acme of burlesque conception. His mellifluous accents will bring tears and laughter from any audience.

The experience of the Xmas trip has proved highly advantageous to all the men, and present prospects argue that the Easter Trip will exceed even the success which attended the club's efforts on the previous trip. Invaluable aid has been rendered the club by Mr. Cowan, our talented teacher of expression, he having infused brilliancy and vigor into the various characters.

The cast of characters is as follows:—

Lysander Lyon, with a fertile imagination, R. S. Busbee. Col. Lyon, with a forgiving disposition; Lysander's uncle,—G. B. Pond. Derby Dashwood, with a Picadilly accent; Lysander's classmate,—R. E. Follin, Francisco, with an elastic conscience; Lysander's valet,—P. S. Cotten. Baby, with the soubriquet of "Little Tootsywootsy"; Lysander's step-daughter—W. G. Cox. Nellie Goldengate, of San Francisco; the Colonel's ward—R. M. Rawls. Prudence Mayflower with New England notions; Nellie's friend,—D. L. Myers.
