On Sunday afternoon the Chapel was crowded with students and villagers who had assembled to hear the memorial services in honor of the late Dr. Manning. It was indeed fitting that this should be done and the attendance on these services brought to light its appropriateness. The tribute and honor paid to the name of Dr. Manning showed in what esteem he was held. His love of his students, his Christ-like life, and his open and upright dealing in all that he had been connected with, showed him to be a man whom the young men of North Carolina can take as a pattern in whatsoever path of life they intend to take.

For the first time since 1896, Washington's birthday was observed by the literary societies here on Wednesday. We have had holiday each year since then but no exercises of any sort have been held. In all the colleges of the country this day is considered one of the most important of the college year and exercises of high order are carried on. We are glad to see that this policy has been inaugurated here again and we hope it is here to stay. The program was in every particular good. The speeches by the representatives were interesting and instructive in every way and the exercises as a whole were enjoyed by all. The name of Washington will always be held sacred by all true Americans and no better way can be devised than by speaking along lines which he so forcibly advocated.

The weather has at last permitted the base-ball candidates to practice. On Monday afternoon the first line up of the season took place although batting and fielding had been indulged in in the earlier part of the month. The work that is being carried on bids fair to make our team a good one. Six of last year's team are back and working hard to keep their positions. The vacant places will be filled by good men as can be seen from those that are vying with each other to capture these much coveted positions. Our captain is using every endeavor to get his men in trim for the first game that is to be played on March 8th. He strenuously urges every man in college who has ever played base-ball to come out. In this way more rivalry will be excited and better work will be done. The whole college shows interest and every effort will be made to make the team of '99 a victorious one.

If athletics is to continue to grow, thrive and add to the welfare of the University and the State, the students as one body must rouse themselves from a seeming carelessness and help Mr. Carr to get the association on a fine financial basis.

It matters not how much we may wish the management "good luck" if we don't go down into our pockets and help, it can not realize our good wishes.

It is not begging when the management asks you for a certain amount, and if you are a loyal supporter of athletics you will not think for a moment that Mr. Carr is asking for more than what he has a right to ask.

Now no one wishes to see the day when athletics in the University will begin to degenerate and to take a back seat in our college life. So let every one respond liberally to the call of Mr. Carr who by his business manner has given assurance that we will have a team this Spring that all may be proud of.

Funeral of the Late Dr. Manning.

The remains of the late Dr. John Manning were conveyed from this place to Pittsboro on last Thursday where they were interred that afternoon. It was indeed a sad scene as the funeral procession wended its way slowly to the station, the College bell meanwhile tolling. The exceedingly inclement weather prevented the student body from escorting the remains to the train.

The funeral services were held in the Episcopal church at Pittsboro, in which Dr. Manning had been a devout worshipper for many years. They were conducted by Rev. Dr. Meade and Rev. C. T. Bland. The following gentlemen acted as pall bearers: Messrs. Biggs, McNinch and Rodman, of the University; Messrs. H. A. Foushee, of Durham, and London, Bynum, Poe and Taylor, of Pittsboro.

And as the setting sun was slowly sinking below the western horizon, in the quiet village of Pittsboro, by the side of his parents and departed daughter, was laid to rest all that remained of our beloved and much lamented Dr. John Manning.

Dr. Alderman went to Raleigh Monday morning.
