The December Magazine.

The December number of the University Magazine is before us. Typographically it is up to the standard set by the first number of the Magazine under the present management, and as it has not yet been said, we might say that this standard is decidedly an advance upon that maintained by any of the predecessors of this board.

In choosing the contents, the Editor-in-chief has made a number of happy selections. The frontispiece is a reproduction of the well-known crayon sketch of the bust of Vance presented to the University by the class of 1899. The opening article is a careful but succinct study of "The Dartmouth Man", which should be interesting and instructive reading for the college student and for those interested in college life. The character of the Dartmouth Man is shown by apt comparison with that of the Harvard Man, and the difference between the new and old Dartmouth Man is given in conclusion.

Ike, The Wrestler, No. 1, of the College Character series appears in this issue. It is time that in college one is thrown in daily contact with "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," and it is a matter of no surprise to meet a character decidedly out of the ordinary, but if "Ike" is an attempt to depict the reality it seems somewhat strained, and from a humorous standpoint a trifle heavy. However the article is not without merit and we hope that the series will not by any means end with its first number.

A sketch of the career of the Hon. Jesse Franklin, gives a short, but accurate account of a man who was prominent in the Revolutionary period of our history and in the early life of our State.

"Sidney's Sweethearts" is a departure from the ordinary line of college stories and deserves commendation. It is laid in the time of Elizabeth and tells of some of the love affairs of the handsome and polished Sir Philip Sidney.

Part II, of "John Lucas," is a continuation of the condition of affairs existing in the South, thirty years ago. The writer states many facts about that period of Southern life which can hardly fail to interest us. While John Lucas does not come in for a full share of attention, the digressions are equally as entertaining. Such articles will do much to make the Magazine of permanent value.

In addition to the articles noted, the Magazine contains a "Story of the Civil War," and some well-written verse, "Flowing Together" and "The Plan Revealed".

In the department of Current Comment, we find an editorial on "Clean Athletics" which will certainly command the careful consideration of thinking people even if they do not agree with the writer. While what is said is well said we have no doubt that there are those who would like to hear the subject further discussed.

The management has inaugurated a new department, Library Notes, and, if the future of this department is to be judged by the present one, it should be "valuable and helpful."

Law Class Occurrences.

A very pleasant event occurred in the Law Lecture Room just before the Holidays.

The class which goes to Raleigh in February to stand the examination for license before the Supreme Court, presented to Judge McRae a handsome parlor lamp and to his associate, Mr. Crawford Biggs, a silver handled umbrella.

Mr. J. M. Shipman made the presentation speech to Judge McRae and Mr. Z. V. Long to Prof. Biggs. Both speakers were very eloquent and they praised and thanked their instructors for the deep interest and untiring energy with which they had taught the class. Both Judge McRae and Prof. Biggs responded in feeling words and thanked the young men very sincerely for their gifts.

Prof. Biggs announced that his connection with the University Law Schools ended with the present class.

This class numbers about 24 men. They are an exceptionally strong lot of men and will no doubt keep up to the standard of their predecessors from the University Law School.
