A BRILLIANT GAME.

Carolina Meets Her Old Foe at Roanoke.

CAROLINA, 0; V. P. I., 0.

Carolina Grit and Virginia Pluck Interest Two Thousand Spectators—A Hard and Furious Struggle—The Result Was No Surprise.

On last Saturday in Roanoke Va., before two thousand enthusiastic spectators, of whom four hundred were rooters from Blacksburg filling the air with college songs and short jerky yells, Carolina, for the second time within the past three years, played the sturdy gridiron warriors of Virginia Polytechnic Institute a tie game, neither side showing such marked superiority over the other, as would allow a touch down to be credited.

It was a hard and furious struggle, both teams fighting stubbornly and strenuously for every inch of contested ground. The Virginians, however, managed to keep the pig skin in Carolina's territory during the first half, seriously threatening her goal on several occasions, coming at one time within 15 yards of their opponents' goal, from which they attempted a drop kick but made a most egregious failure. Again, after V. P. I., by a rapid succession of heavy line plunges and end plays, had advanced the leather to the 25 yard line of the "Tar Heels," Mr. Councilman, not satisfied with his former effort, stepped back and made another futile attempt at a drop kick from the field. This proved to be V. P. I.'s last chance to score.

The result of the game, to those thoroughly conversant with the foot ball world, comes as no surprise. It was believed, indeed predicted, by those competent to judge, that Carolina would do exceedingly well if she should divide honors with her strong Virginia rival. The names of Councilman, who was All-Southern full back last year; Carpenter, All-Southern left half back, and Ware, a brilliant end, were repeatedly mentioned in confirmation of their belief.

The V. P. I. game demonstrated beyond a doubt our weakness in returning the ball after receiving a kick off. To use a strong expression, the Virginians simply had us "skinned" in this respect, and by their ability thus properly to advance the ball accounts to a great extent for the game's being fought in our territory. Strengthen yourself on this weak point, Varsity and we will give Virginia—a sound drubbing.

THE GAME.

At 3.30 Captains Foust and Carpenter walked briskly to the center of the field; a coin was tossed into the air; heads fell, and Carolina chose to defend the west goal.

Councilman, for V. P. I., began the struggle by placing the ball over Carolina's goal. Carolina brought the ball out on the 25 yard line and Graves punted 45 yards. V. P. I. returned the leather 15. The Virginians hit Donnelly and were repulsed, but on the next pass plowed center for 4 yards. Carpenter was then sent through right guard for 10 yards and over left tackle for 2. Byrd hit Farlow for only one yard but on the next pass gained 4 yards over our big Quaker friend. The Virginians then tested Townsend's end and immediately formed a good opinion of the clever little player. Being unable to make the required distance the ball was given to Carolina. Jacocks hit the line for no gain. Mann went through right tackle for 5 yards. Jones repeated the performance. Jacocks again smashed the line for no gain and Mann did likewise. Carolina found the Virginia line stubborn and determined and was thus forced to surrender the ball.

Councilman went through Farlow for 3 yards and on the next pass gained 5. Byrd went over Jones for 3 yards. Carpenter hit the line for five yards through right tackle and made 3 over right guard. Councilman jumped the line for two yards. V. P. I. was then on Carolina's 15 yard line. In the next rush a V. P. I. man was off side and this considerably assisted the boys, who were hearing the continuous report, in breathing freely. Being on Carolina's 25 yard line. Carpenter signalled for a drop kick but was unable to send the leather in the right direction.

Graves drove the ball 35 yards and V. P. I. returned 20. By a beautiful tackle by Jacocks, V. P. I. lost three yards but on the next rush gained 5 through Jones and Townsend. V. P. I. then went 3 yards over tackle, 2 on a delayed pass and 3 over Foust. Carpenter passed Fisher for 4 yards and bucked center for 4 more. On "guards back" the Virginians hit Farlow but were thrown back and the same spirit prevailed at Mr. Donnelly's quarters. V. P. I. was then on Carolina's 30 yard line and Councilman anxious to score, attempted another drop kick but made a miserable failure.

Mann tried to circle left end but was downed for a loss of 3 yards. Graves, on a double pass, gained 10 yards. Foust bucked the line for 1 yard and Mann failed to gain. V. P. I. struck Jones and Townsend for 5 yards, but failed to make the distance over Farlow and Fisher. Jones smashed the line for 5 yards and on the next play hit center for 8.

Time up. Ball on Carolina's 45 yard line. Score: Carolina 0; V. P. I. 0.

SECOND HALF.

Graves drove the pig skin 40 yards into V. P. I.'s territory, but by a magnificent run, aided by a strong interference, Carpenter returned the ball 30 yards. On "guards back" formation the Virginians gained 4 yards, but on the next two assaults they found Foust and Farlow a tower of strength and the ball was given to Carolina.

Foust carried the leather 4 yards and Engle made it one yard better. In the attempt to make a double pass Graves was thrown for a loss of 10 yards. Carolina then kicked 20 yards and V. P. I. returned 12 yards. Carpenter made 5 yards between Jones and Townsend, next pass circled Townsend's end for 10 yards. Holt was then substituted in Townsend's place. V. P. I. made 3 yards over Jones and 4 over Farlow. For not properly passing the ball Carolina was given 10 yards. The ball was then on Carolina's 38 yard line in her possession. Graves punted 35 yards and Byrd returned 25. After making several gains the ball was given to Carolina for holding in the line. Graves then kicked 25 yards and Fisher downed the man in histracks. Carpenter was given the ball and skirted Holt's end for 20 yards. It availed them nothing, however, as the ball was given to Carolina for holding.

Mann bucked the line for 3 yards and Jones went 5 and 5 again. Mann hit centre for 5 yards and Jacocks went through tackle for 3. Foust hit the line for 8 yards. V. P. I. was given the ball for holding in the line. Carpenter kicked 35 yards and Graves only returned only 2 yards being tripped by Jacocks. Jacocks circled left end for 10 yards but fumbled. Newton relieved Jacocks Graves sent the ball 40 yards and Fisher tackles his man in his tracks. After making two unsuccessful attempts to destroy our line, Councilman kicked 35 yards and Graves advanced 10. Graves drove the ball 40 yards and it was returned 10.

V. P. I. kicked 35 yards.

Time up. Ball on Carolina's 45 yard line. Score: Carolina 0; V. P. I. 0. Two twenty minute halves.

With the Societies.

In the Phi. Society: Query Resolved. "That an amendment should be made to our Constitution to regulate the trust."

The affirmative won. Mr. R. W. Herring was the best debater.

Shakespeare Club.

The first meeting of the Shakespeare Club, for this term, was held Thursday night, Dr. Thos. Hume, the President, called the house to order and appointed Messrs. Harvey and Horner and Gwyn as a nominating committee. Dr. C. A. Smith was unanimously chosen as Vice President and Mr. H. R. McFadyen, '03, as Secretary of the Club. These officers were instructed to announce the names of students who will compose the Executive Committee.

The attraction of the evening was an address by the President. After defining the purpose and aim of the organization, he drew attention to his subject, "The Evolution of Shakespeare's Chronicle Plays."

This topic the Doctor, in that entertaining conversational way in which he weaves himself into his subject and comes in close touch with his audience, developed under heads. (1). From the old ballads like Robin Hood. (2). The Chronicles of Hallinshed and old crude chronicles which combined historical figures with the humors and weakness of common humanity (3) The work of Greene and Marlowe which presented situations and types that were improved and added to by the plastic genius of Shakespeare. Included in his stock-in-trade were also old types and figures handed down from Greek and Latin Comedy as in Falstaff re-combined and idealized. Apt illustrations illuminated the subject throughout.

An appreciative assembly followed closely Dr. Hume's remarks and much interest was manifested. Many of the students lingered to give the Secretary their names, and others will doubtless offer theirs to the Executive Committee. Under the able direction of Drs. Hume and Smith an excellent opportunity is offered for literary research and magazine work.

The Soph-Junior Debate.

The Soph-Junior debate between the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Societies will be held about three weeks from now. If the debaters have time enough to get ready they want to have the debate on the Friday night before Thanksgiving. The subject this year is "Resolved, That Our National Government Should Own and Operate the Coal Mines."

Hudson, '05, and Hudson, '04, will represent the Di.; Daniels, '05, and Dameron, '04, the Phi.
