Carolina Wins From Virginia DONE IN OLD RICHMOND

Magnificent Pitching, Heavy Hitting and Fast Fielding Wins From Virginia.

"Carolina 6, Virginia 1" tells the glad tidings of the signal victory of Monday afternoon, when the fast team of the University of Virginia, bearing in its belt the scalp of old Yale, went down in defeat before the magnificent pitching, the terrific batting and the brilliant fielding of North Carolina's team. Chastened by the defeat of Saturday from possible over confidence, keyed up by determination to retrieve that defeat and show Virginia that Carolina can still play baseball as well as football, they outclassed the Virginians at every point of the game.

Cunningham did the twirling for Carolina and was insoluble, giving only one free pass, striking out 7 and letting down the Virginians with two swats and one run. The Virginians could bang the sphere but that was all. Back of Cunningham were seven men, baseball players, who gave him support of the gilded variety and as much as could have been desired.

For four innings the battling teams seemed equally matched and no one scored, though the Carolina men came nearer it than did their rivals. When Hoff walked to first in the fifth inning and Moses drove out a two bagger which sent Hoff in home, the game took on an added interest.

When Carolina came to the bat the ball was kept rolling. There was a look of determination in Captain Stem's eye as he whirled his bat and dashed the sphere far out into the field and raced down to second. Harris followed with a single which scored Stem. Rogers singled. Harris scored on a wild pitch, and on Jones's single Harris came in.

In the sixth Patterson hit safely and scored on Stem's two bagger. Harris's sacrifice brought in Stem. In the seventh Calder reached first on an error and scored on sacrifices by Stem and Story. The game was ours, 6 to 1.

VIRGINIA TURNS TABLES. Carolina Was Up in the Air For Two Innings, Long Enough to Lose the Game.

The second game with Virginia at Charlottesville Tuesday had a less satisfactory termination than the first. The last part of the story must be told first. The game was forfeited by Carolina by the score of 9 to 0, rather than submit to what the team considered an unjust ruling by Umpire Heffner. The forfeiture made no change in the score as it then stood, though Mr. Heffner's decision did change it.

James had just scored on Cunningham's two bagger down the first base line when the umpire reversed his first ruling and called the two bagger a foul, thus annulling the run. It was this decision that ended the game. Susong was in the box for Virginia and Patterson for Carolina. Susong was the steadier of the two and was better supported. The North Carolina team seemed in poorer form than that exhibited by them on the preceding day, the game being lost in the first two innings. After the third inning with the score 9 to 0, both teams settled down and played splendid ball, not another team crossing the pan until James's contested run in the ninth.

Lowler and Walker, the two men up first went down in order. But the inning was by no means closed, for Patterson went up in the air, filled the bases by letting Graham, Dalton and Maddux walk and forced a run by giving Rice four balls. Then Huff knocked a grounder to left field, scoring everybody on the bases, and Chandler brought him in by hitting to Harris, who fumbled. Susong fanned and the side was out.

When Virginia came to bat the second time she proceeded to do it some more. Lowler walked and Walker hit, sending Lowler to second. Graham fanned. Dalton hit a grounder to center field which Story threw wild and all three scored.

The third inning added one to the Virginians' account when Chandler walked and Susong hit to left, going to second and scoring Chandler. Lowler again walked. Walker hit to Harris, who threw Susong out at third. Graham went out second to first, Stem making a double to Rogers.

In Carolina's half Montgomery reached first on fumble of short stop and went to second on Calder's sacrifice. He was left sitting there however.

Then both teams settled down to hard work and the rest of the story is a tale of "out second to first," "out third to first," and "fanned". Virginia came to the bat in the ninth. Graham succumbed short to first, Dalton vainly attempted to YELLING YANIGANS WIN Nine to Five Tells the Story of How We Did Not Win From the Professional Bunch.

The Yanigans (spell it with an i, if you please) and the Varsity did battle on our home diamond last Thursday afternoon and the "furriners" proved masculine enough to win by a score of nine to five. The beaming rays of the sun beat down pitilessly, taking all the spirit out of the grandstanders, the bleacherites and the players alike. It looked at first as if even the Baltimore aggregation would succumb like the others. Their heavy batting, however, combined with the lack of rooting and the consequent sleepy playing of the Varsity at times proved too much for the Tar Heels.

Cunningham pitched for Carolina for five innings, retiring in favor of Patterson. The game was featureless except for Capt. Stem's usual star game at short and the steady catching of Nie for the Yanigans.

A series of errors on the part of the Yanigans allowed Calder and James to cross the pan in the first inning, while only one of the leaguers reached first, Zurlage being given a pass. In the second Harris, Hart and Raney went down in order, while Fritz for the visitors, walked to first, stole second and third and scored on Nie's single to center. In the third an error each by Patterson and Harris and a passed ball by Raney brought in Rig and Zurlage.

The leaguers were not satisfied with this but in the fourth Woodward, colliding with one of "Cunny's" curves, walked to first, reached third on a wild pitch and together with Rick, whose patience locate the sphere, and Maddux's fly was nipped by short.

Then came Carolina's last chance to avoid a shut out. Burt James, "the finest third baseman on the Southern college diamond," slammed one at short and rested on first. Bull Story rapped out a hot one to centerfield, advancing James to second. Patterson fanned, and the crowd in the Chapel sighed. But then rose Cunningham to the bat, he whose line drive saved the Wake Forest game, and swatted a liner down the first base line, reaching first safely and scoring James! The shut out was avoided. But then stepped in the umpire and spoiled it all. Reversing his first decision after James had crossed the plate, he declared Cunningham's hit a foul, a ruling which, of course, annulled James's run. With two men on bases and one out, the Carolina team left the field and the game was Virginia's, 9 to nothing.

had been rewarded, scored on Cornell's bingle to center. Cornell bided his time and did the Prodigal Son act on Capt. Halm's single. This made it 6 to 2. But in fifth Calder took first as a gift, reached third on James's single and tallied on an error of second baseman, James doing likewise on "Cunny's" single. The sixth yielded one, Hart walking and scoring on a single by Story. That was the last of it for us.

The professionals began where Carolina left off, tallying one in the eighth and two in the ninth, on Zurlage's hot single past Harris.

The Fresh-Soph Debate Postponed.

Owing to the illness of Mr. Marion S. Huske, who is the Freshman representative of the Phi society in the Fresh-Soph debate, the debate will probably have to be called off for this spring. The date set was May 4th, a week from tomorrow night. Mr. Huske, who was taken ill this week, has gone home and is forbidden by the doctor to return.

The other debaters are Messrs. E. L. Stewart, '08, of the Phi, and Marmaduke Robins, '08 and E. C. McIntosh '09, of the Di. The query is that of the direct election of United States Senators, the teams were evenly matched and an interesting debate was promised. An effort has been made to get a substitute for Mr. Huske, but the time is so short no one was willing to volunteer.

The TAR HEEL is indebted to Mr. Harry P. Harding for an invitation to the graduating exercises of the Charlotte graded schools, May 18th. Prof. M. C. S. Noble, of the University, will deliver the address.
