THE VARSITY season is fast coming to a close. Saturday's game will probably be the last. While no big games have appeared on our schedule this fall we have much of which to be proud in our team. It has worked this year under peculiarly unfavorable circumstances. It began the season, weakened by the loss of experienced players through the new rules, facing the heaviest schedule that Carolina has ever had. However the members of the squad did not flinch; they went to work, with the result that our Varsity has showed up far more favorably against the heavy Northern teams this year than did our team last year, considering the difference in weight and experience. Furthermore the Varsity has undoubtedly played in hard luck this year, playing all over its opponents more than once, but being unable to score, nevertheless, simply through tough luck, each time. For these reasons the team is due more hearty support than ever at the hands of the student body. It has worked faithfully and earnestly in the face of the most adverse circumstances, and has played always a manly, straightforward game. The hardest game of all is coming Saturday. Let's give the boys a send-off that will make them feel that we are for them and are proud of the record they have made this season.

ALTHOUGH the Varsity has played but one game on the Hill this fall the student body has certainly not been denied the pleasure of seeing some good football. The class games this year have been of an unusually high order. If the present class series has ever been surpassed, it has not been surpassed for several years. All five of the class games that have been played so far have been hotly contested. Not one has been uninteresting, for, in each case, the opposing teams have been evenly matched and have fought for all that the game had in it.

While each of the class teams has played real football, the Freshmen have clearly outplayed their opponents each time that they have appeared on the gridiron. The college has, in this, much to congratulate itself upon, for it is from these Freshmen of today that our Varsity material must come for the next four years. The indications are that N. C. will lose none of her prestige in athletics.

It is true that it is still early in the college year, but it is not too early for the Seniors to begin considering the matter of a class gift. If the class of 1907 intends to adopt the endowment plan which has been used by the classes of 1905 and 1906—and it will be hard to secure a class gift plan better in theory—it should take care not to make the mistake made by last year's Senior class. Last year the business managers of the class gift fund were not appointed until close on to commencement. As a result, the managers themselves and the other members of the class having their hands full, the signing of many of the pledges was overlooked. Consequently the managers of the fund are having much extra work now in securing the pledges by mail. While the endowment gift system is much superior to any other so far devised it is also more complicated, and the managers of such a gift should be given plenty of time to get it in good shape before commencement.

Now that we are on the subject of business managers it might be well to discuss the question of managing the University Magazine, which is now the only college publication that is not self-supporting. Why is this the case? Under the arrangement that the business managers receive the profits the Yackety Yack was, last year, a great success financially; the TAR HEEL, which is published upon a very similar basis, has been self-supporting practically all of its life. Now in the case of the Magazine the business manager receives only a small per cent on the advertisements. If the Magazine were put on the same basis as the Yackety Yack, why should it not, too, become, literally, a "howling success?" As an advertising medium it is far superior to the annual, and is not far behind the TAR HEEL. With a hustling business manager it could not fail to become a paying investment, especially for the societies, which are now burdened with its support.

THE TAR HEEL feels that, in behalf of the student body of the University of North Carolina, it must extend the hand of congratulation to Vanderbilt for the good showing that she made against Michigan in football the other day. According to all accounts the Commodores outplayed the Badgers in fine style. If Vanderbilt continues to develop in football Michigan will have to look to her laurels as champion of the Middle West.

Scrubs vs. Warrenton.

The scrubs have arranged a football game with the Warrenton High School eleven to be played in Chapel Hill tomorrow afternoon. The Warrenton boys are reported to have a strong team, and the outlook is for a good game. The students should turn out in a body and show the second team that they believe that it represents Carolina just as much as does the Varsity.
