THE Junior Prom festivities were a great success. The Dramatic Club made a hit, the Senior reception was enjoyable, the Washington birthday exercises were entertaining and instructive, and the dances were nothing short of brilliant.

And it does our heart good. As has been said in these columns before, such an occasion, if thought of at all two years ago, existed merely in the brain of some dreamer as something that might come to pass in the distant future. But it has happened and we believe that a brighter day has dawned for the social life of the University. We long to see the time when the dividing line between the frats and the non-frats will pass away completely. And unless the pendulum swings backward such a time is not far in the future.

THE baseball men say that Coach Stockdale has made them sore—physically. He has begun the training in earnest, and while there has been little ball playing as yet, he has been putting the men through a course of physical culture that would delight the heart of Karl Jansen.

The tin canning process began Monday and will continue gradually.

The fact, however, that a man has been tin canned does not mean he is forbidden the use of the field, for One end of the park has been set aside for the use of any one that desires to play. And just here Mr. Stockdale has departed from the former way of doing things. He has shown that not only is he anxious to put a good 'varsity team on the field, but also to train those who have no hope of making the team this year. The students are realizing that in Mr. Stockdale they have a "coach who is a coach."

AT the University of Virginia the students and faculty meet once a month for the purpose of getting better acquainted and of discussing questions of interest to the University at large. These occasions are called "University Hours." They are informal and each student is expected to enter into the spirit of the thing and to give whatever ideas he may have for the improvement of the college life. We have been wondering if such an occasion would not be of value at this University. We have often felt that students and faculty here are not well enough acquainted. Possibly such an occasion would help matters.

WHEN all has been said, if the Junior Prom festivities did nothing more, they caused the presence here of nearly fifty of the fair daughters of the State. Doesn't this mean happiness, my brethren?

THE dollar fee clause for the Athletic Association was adopted by the vote of the majority, yet only one hundred and twenty-five men have joined. Why did the others vote for it?

MANAGER Gray has season tickets for sale, and it is necessary for him to sell enough to justify the issuance. Help him. You will save about $3.

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE

Undergraduate Department. The One Hundred and Forty-second Session will begin September 27, 1907. The course, which covers a period of four years, of eight and one-half months each, is eminently practical, and properly graded, beginning with laboratory instruction in the fundamental subjects, and concluding with a comprehensive system of clinical instruction, terminating in the Fourth Year with the assignment of students as clinical clerks in the Hospital.

A large proportion (at least 80 per cent.) of the graduating classes secure positions as Resident Physicians in Hospitals.

Summer School for Graduates. The clinics and laboratories of this Department are open throughout the year for the benefit of those who wish to engage in graduate work. For those whose time is more limited, a comprehensive course is given, beginning this year May 13, and continuing for a period of six weeks. This course is designed to meet the needs of the practitioner.

Dean of the Medical Department, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.
