

to the Junior Class, the visiting young ladies, and the invited guests. Although the reception was delayed by the rather late performance of the Dramatic Club it was nevertheless a most enjoyable affair. It was held in the capacious apartments of the new library.

Here the students became acquainted with the visiting young ladies, here delicious refreshments were served and eaten to the accompaniment of the stirring strains from the well trained University Orchestra, and here a pleasant and informal dance was held.

Those who composed the receiving party were Messrs. J. W. Hester, T. Hines, J. A. Fore, B. L. Banks, and W. C. Woodard. It seemed, however, that every member of the Senior Class was host; all the guests enjoyed freely the hospitality of the class of 1908.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

The annual exercises commemorative of the birthday of Washington were held Friday morning under the auspices of the Dialectic and Philanthropic Literary Societies. The exercises were held in Gerrard Hall and were presided over by Mr. W. P. Stacy of the Di Society. The exercises consisted of music by the University Orchestra, and speeches by Mr. S. Winborne of the Phi and by Mr. W. H. Duls of the Di.

Mr. Winborne spoke first and had as his subject, "The Possibilities of a Southern President." He told of the leading part played by the South in national politics before the war and the insignificant part played by the South since the war, and then showed that the time was ripe for the South to reclaim her former high position and put forward a Southern man for president.

Mr. W. H. Duls spoke on "Southern Leadership." He pointed out qualities of older leadership, called attention to the present conditions of the South, and showed that the present leadership of the South based on the conservatism and moral stamina of the old would in the end meet the present conditions and solve the negro problem and all other problems.

Both speeches were very interesting and instructive. They were well delivered and were a credit to the speakers and the Societies which they represented.

FRAT HOP

Friday afternoon the "Frat Hop" came off. This dance was given to the Junior and Senior classes by the ten fraternities. The old gymnasium presented a very different scene from what it usually does. Instead of climbing the rope and "skinning the cat," there were waltzes and two-steps. Instead of gym suits, there were dainty dresses. The leader of the dance was Kennon Borden, with Jim Hanes and Don Gilliam assistants. The music was made by Prof. Levin of Raleigh and his world-famous orchestra. There were about sixteen different dances, all but the first six of which were "generals." This gave the stags, of whom there was a great horde, a chance to lead the fair damsels through the intricacies of the waltz. But the best of times have an end, and so did the "Hop."

JUNIOR PROM

Friday night, the dancers assembled at 9:30 for the much-talked-of Junior Prom. Great as had been the outlook of the Prom, the reality was even greater. George Thomas lead the figures with Miss Josephine Boylan of Raleigh. His "side-partners" were Tom McManis and Wade Montgomery. With the exception of an intermission for refreshments, the dance lasted until two o'clock. Taken as a whole, the occasion was a decided success.

There were many more boys than ladies and of course everybody could not get as many dances as they wished, but still everybody had a good time. And so we say, "Well done, '09."

Among those present were:—

Miss Louise Venable, Chapel Hill, with Will Woodard.

Miss Cantie Venable, Chapel Hill, with Basie Muse.
