

Bishop Strange's Sermon

"The intimate relation of mind and body is now recognized. An ill mind produces an ill body and an ill body causes an ill mind. In the same way our thoughts shape our character. Therefore let us all be hopeful, courageous, and noble in our thoughts and we will be noble in character. 'Whatever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be praise, think on these things.'" but poems. And if there be not of these a great number, it may be ably said that the quality sufficeth for the quantity. These poems will be of general and of particular interest, or to speak more plainly, they will be about things and about people, things in general and people in particular.

Indeed, it may be said in all truth, that the Yackety Yack is the best ever—he that is without one in May will be even as he that saved his book money for drinks when the Professor says on class, "Let us turn to the diagram on page 23."

guests at the home of Mr. Chas. Whedbee, secretary of the Board of Trustees of the University, and this gentleman and his charming little wife made our stay so pleasant that always we will have a tender spot in our hearts for Hertford. Indeed all the boys were enthusiastic in their praise of this beautiful old town, and I am sure that the heart of more than one was heavy at having such a short time to stay. Here we had a large and enthusiastic audience.

We reached the city late yesterday afternoon and learned that we were not to show last night. It was deemed best to show only one night and we were all glad. Last night we were tendered a most delightful reception at the home of Rae Kramer's father. The reception was entirely informal and was thoroughly enjoyed by all the boys. We met some of Carolina's fairest daughters, and this reception will long be remembered as one of the bright spots in our lives.

We give a performance here tomorrow night and begin our homeward journey Tuesday.

Robbery at University Station.

Sunday night the depot at University Station was broken into and robbed. The robber or robbers were shrewd enough to choose the first of the month as the time for the raid. They evidently knew that checks were sent at this time to the students in the University. Judging from the number of students whose checks failed to come the robbers must have made a considerable haul.

Entrance into the depot was made through a window of the waiting room. The door to the ticket office was then forced open and a little money and two tickets were taken from the cash drawer. The tickets were Nos. 3906 and 3907. The robbers then broke through the door of the warehouse and ransacked everything in sight. They took some of the contents of a few sample cases belonging to some drummers and then cut open the mail bags and relieved them of letters containing money and checks. There was one letter which they tore open but they let the check alone. It was a government check to Mr. O. B. Tenney, a rural mail carrier of Chapel Hill. The number of checks and the amount of cash taken is yet unknown. Detectives are at work and will probably land these meddlers with Uncle Sam's mail.

Mr. Connor Speaks before the Historical Society.

Mr. R. D. W. Connor of the State Historical Society last Monday night presented in the Chemistry Lecture Room a paper of great value before the local Historical Society. The subject of the paper was, "The Priority of North Carolina in the Demand for Independence."

The speaker discussed and explained the many difficulties which the North Carolina colonists had to contend with during the administration of Governor Martin and his predecessors and showed conclusively that North Carolina was first in the demand for independence. The paper was greatly enjoyed by the large audience present. It showed thorough investigation; it was non-partizan, clear and convincing. As Dr. Battle suggested, it should by all means be published. The Historical Society and the college of which he is an alumnus hope that Mr. Connor will visit Chapel Hill more frequently in the future.

THE MOST PROFITABLE YEAR OF HIS LIFE

A Patron Writes About Bingham.

Wilmington, N. C., Jan. 6th, 1908. Prof. Preston Lewis Gray, Mebane, N. C.

Dear Sir:—My son Robert left on the morning train for Bingham. If his progress is as satisfactory in the next five months as it has been in the past three months, it will have been the most profitable year of his life, to say nothing of sowing the good seed for the future.

I shall be on the look out for pupils: rest assured, I shall always speak for Bingham.

Wishing for you and Mrs. Gray a happy and prosperous New Year, I am,

Sincerely yours,
MRS. F. R. STRANGE.
