WHENEVER OUR thoughts turn to Saturday's game with Georgetown we feel like patting somebody on the back and whispering into his ear, "Good luck, old man." If we see any member of the football team handy he must receive congratulations. At the continuous report the report kept coming, "By steady line plunges Carolina advances the ball to the middle of the field," and so on. Such was the report that used to come from our team in 1905. Every man works so well in every play that the reporter does not say that Belden, or Porter, or Crosswell advances the ball ten yards; he says Carolina advances the ball ten yards. When we wish to see what a team of that kind accomplishes, we only have to turn back in our memory to the days of 1904 and '05. That lack of fight and ginger which they say was lacking in the game against V. M. I. was quite reversed Saturday. The linesmen were not content with simply holding when a play was tried over them, they considered it part of their business to get through their opponents and break up their play. The only criticism we have to make is that the men seemed to have an attack of that old failing, over-confidence, for about five minutes in the last half. It won't do to let up a minute in a close football game. Georgetown managed here to give us a fine scare in that five minutes of letting up. Georgetown, Saturday, was guilty one time of slugging. When one comes to think that Carolina has been playing football for season after season, in all kinds of games, in which she was beaten, games in which she was winning handily, and games in which she had to fight for every inch of ground she gained, and yet in all these games not a single instance of anything like unclean football, then we may feel proud of a record not to be surpassed. It is no mean boast to say that a spirit of gentlemanliness and fair play is so strong at Carolina that not once in years has one of her football players been guilty of playing dirty ball. One thing that our men did in the game in Washington and did often, was to fumble the ball. Although this was made up for in part by the way in which the team covered the ball, still, how much better would it have been if we had held the ball tight when we got it. We must say however that the way those fellows of ours kept the ball covered was nothing short of marvelous. Another lesson our team seems to have learned by heart is to keep their eyes on the ball always. Wherever the ball was, there was a Carolina player also.

When we go up against V. P. I. and Virginia we've got to hold on to the ball all the time. We had might as well learn that lesson now.

Carolina vs Guilford

The final stipulations for a tennis meet with Guilford College have been arranged. The Guilford team will come here today, and the meet will begin with the doubles this afternoon at 3:30. Tomorrow afternoon at the same hour the singles will be played. As has been customary, the doubles will score 40 points for the winner and the singles 30 each.
Hine and Vance will compose the Guilford team. One of the Guilford students says in a letter received yesterday, "Vance is strong on the back hand and plays well at the net, while Hine is good on drives." The opportunity to watch the strokes and formation of play of the players of other colleges will be of worth to every tennis player here.
The games will be played on the Gresham court, admission of twenty-five cents.
