The Carr building has been replastered and new floors have been put in, so that it is now the best-fitted up dormitory on the campus.

The training table for the football squad began at Mr. Bright's Boarding House on Monday morning, with twelve men attending.

N. B. Cannady and Mr. Hardee, two old Carolina men who are studying medicine at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, were on the Hill for a few days last week.

CLASS MEETING OF 1913

The class of 1913 met in Gerrard Hall last Saturday and transacted several items of business.

The question of finances was first brought up, and disposed of by the appointment of a committee to investigate and make a report.

President Vann then brought up the question of hazing and asked for discussion. After some cross firing as to how the motion should be stated, the following resolution was unanimously adopted by the class:

WHEREAS, hazing is characteristic of small colleges and preparatory schools, and is regarded as puerile and out of place in a University community,

THEREFORE, we, the members of the class of 1913, of the University of North Carolina, pledge ourselves to exert every effort to suppress all forms of hazing in which force or intimidation is used. And to that end, we further pledge ourselves to use all reasonable means to prosecute openly, all offenders.

A copy of the resolution was passed around and practically every member of the class signed it.

The class election was with good feeling and harmony, and the following officers were named:

President, R. W. Scott.
Vice President, D. J. Walker.
Secretary, W. R. Petteway.
Treasurer, L. B. Gunter.
Historian, F. L. Euleess.

The meeting adjourned with yells for 1913 and for the new class president.

IMPROVEMENTS ON THE CAMPUS.

The improvements made during the summer on the campus and in the buildings of the University, while not numerous are, to say the least, of a striking nature. One has only to go to the Carr building to see the truth of this statement. Go to the Carr Barn, then remember its delapidated condition last year—its walls done in ink and blacking, its battered doors, shattered windows, and broken staircases. A great change and improvement has been made during the summer months. New floors have been put down, new doors hung, new window lights placed; the walls and ceilings have been replastered, the wainscoatings and other woodwork repainted. A sufficient number of electric lights have been placed in the halls. The bathrooms have been made servicable for humans. In fact, to use the campus expression, "the Carr Barn has been fixed." Even the walk across Cameron Ave. leading to the building has been provided with cement steps. All these improvements have long been needed and are much welcomed by the students. But the improvements have used up the entire fund appropriated for this purpose—to the very evident neglect of the other buildings. Nowhere is the University's lack of funds seen clearer than in the rough condition of its dormitories. It was only after diligent and painstaking search that the following improvements were discovered by the reporter:

New dippers have been placed at the pump—one of them with a handle.

The grass has been cut.
A new bulletin board has been placed at Commons.

A door has been cut in the northeast corner of the Medical Building.
"Bish" has not returned.

From Carolina Colleges.

WAKE FOREST, N. C.—A record-breaking attendance under highly auspicious circumstances ushered in the session of 1910-1911 of Wake Forest on Tuesday. The number of enrollments has grown each year, until now more than 340 have registered this early in the session. The summer law school has just closed, with the splendid and unprecedented record of twenty-nine licensed attorneys from thirty-four applicants. This high measure of success has established a precedent which is quite likely to be followed until the standards are raised still higher.

A year or two ago the authorities of Wake Forest College decided to permit a revival of football in that institution on condition that the student-body would see to it that hazing in all forms should be stopped. This stipulation was promptly agreed to, and that it might be observed, a committee was appointed from the student-body to have charge of any disciplinary measures which might be found necessary. So thoroughly have the members of this committee attended to their duties that it is now thought that the students elected during the past week to serve for the ensuing session will have little to do in this direction. Charlotte Observer.

GUILFORD COLLEGE, N. C.—Guilford College never began a year under more favorable circumstances. The various dormitories are well filled with students, the teaching force well equipped and ready for the term's work.

DURHAM, N. C.—Never in the history of Trinity College have prospects been brighter. While the exact enrollment is not known, it is safe to predict that at least 165 will be enrolled as new men, with possibly 250 old men. This marks a new era in the history of Trinity College, eclipsing by far any previous record. President Few and his co-workers are elated over the prospects.
