SINCE the game with the University of South Carolina, which was schedule for Chapel Hill, has now been changed to Durham, we will have the opportunity to see only two Varsity games on the Hill this fall. One of those games is to be played with V. M. I. this afternoon. Don't fail, then, to go to the game today, thinking there will be plenty more. Go out and see how the new game is played, and help to win it by some old time Tar Heel "rooting"

EVERY man in college who is not engaged in some other form of athletics is requested to come out on the track for the fall practice. Too few men have responded to the call which was issued by Coach Cartmell last week. Both Coach Cartmell and the Captain for the fall season, Captain Parsley, urge that every man come out who can, whether he thinks he can do anything in track work or not. He may have his opinion changed by a little practice.

Captain Parsley offers three good reasons why a man should try for qualification and the contest on October 29:

First, the training will be of inestimable value, offering as it does an opportunity for physical training under a coach who is himself one of the best trained athletes in the country.

Secondly, great good is to be derived from entering any contest that calls out one's powers of endurance and skill; and in this case a valuable medal may be won.

Thirdly, it will put the contestants in line for the Varsity track team next spring.

If any man who could go out for track is holding back for any petty reason, the foregoing arguments of captain Parsley should be sufficient to convince him that the training will be worth his while.

WITHIN the past five years Carolina has played two games with V. M. I., our opponent today. The result of those two contests left us even as to the number of games lost and won, Carolina winning in 1905 by a score of 17 to 0 and V. M. I. taking the game in 1909 by a score of 3 to 0.

The two teams will doubtless be well matched this afternoon and each of them may be depended on to do its best. The following clipping from The Caded gives us an idea of what V. M. I. thinks of her team this year:

"The prospects for football this year are very bright. Most of the old men have returned, except a few lost by graduation. Some of the new cadets are showing up very well, especially those who had experience before coming here. The majority, though, have had practically no experience and it will require time and labor to make football players of them.

"The schedule this season is particularly hard, such games as Virginia, Georgetown, Carolina and St. Johns appearing on it, and it will be no easy matter to carry off the honors from such opponents. Our first game is with Carolina on Oct. 1st, which will be somewhere near Chapel Hill. They are eager to play us to wipe out the defeat of last year and it will be a hard fight for the victory. We can get into shape as early if not earlier than they can, but the report is that they have a very strong team this season.

Football this season will be so altered from the old game that the first games are liable to be full of arguments and quarreling and probably the veterans will have many points to learn before they can be stars at the new game of football. There will be many surprises and the winning teams will be the ones who learn the new rules first."

CHAPEL TALKS

The chapel exercises the past week have lived up to the standard set the week before in interest. On Monday Dr. McNider continued his series of talks on keeping in health. His subject was diseases and how to prevent them. He sustained the interest of the students all through, and when he finished, the round of applause that followed as the boys left the chapel showed that his words had made an impression.

On Tuesday, Mr. Hall explained the courses in Bible study offered by the Y. M. C. A. this year. Three courses are offered, the Life of Christ, the Life of St. Paul, and the study of the Old Testament characters. Mr. Hall made an effective plea for these courses, showing the practical arrangement of the course whereby a man is able to acquire a more thorough knowledge of the Bible without losing any appreciable time from his other pursuits. This is made possible by a compact arrangement of the text book, allotting a few minutes each day to the mastering of some particular topic.

On Wednesday morning Dr. Venable made known the conditions upon which a man may change his course of study. He stated that in the future all men wishing to change a given course would be required to stand an examination on the back work already gone over in the study they wished to substitute, and until such an examination was satisfactorily passed the student would be compelled to attend class in both the study he wished to drop and the one he wished to substitute. He told the story of an old farmer who went into a shop bearing the sign, "Woman's Exchange". When the lady in charge interrogated him he inquired, "Be this the woman's exchange? On being told that it was he asked, "Be you the woman?" Upon being told that his assumption was correct, he exclaimed, "Well, I guess I'll keep my same old gal." Dr. Venable applied this anecdote to the view-point of the student who now wishes to change his under the new conditions.

Dr. Venable conducted chapel Thursday, dismissing the student immediately after the devotional part of the exercises.

Dr. Venable spoke in chapel Friday for only a few moments, referring to the opening of the football season, and reminding the students of Carolina's duty as a hostess to the visiting teams.
