EXCHANGE CLIPPINGS

From George Washington News:
George Washington, though deprived by its situation of some of the more picturesque of American student customs, has a few distinctive usages of its own. The traditional hatchet of our celebrated Almus Pater is taken as the emblem of sovereignty, supplanting the scepter. This symbol of power is handed down by the Senior Class in Columbian College on Class Night, the eve of their abdication, to their heirs and successors, the Junior Class, with many admonitions as to proper conduct and wishes for a prosperous reign. This emblem is a gift of the Class of 1905. In the Medical School a hatchet is hidden somewhere about the building on an appointed day. The class that finds the symbol of sovereignty henceforth takes precedence as the Hatchet Class for the year.

There are no customs prescribing the wearing of distinctive caps or other insignia by the different classes. The freshmen may rejoice to find that the rules and regulations which, though inspired by a thoughtful and paternal care for his higher welfare, yet seem to be a tyrannous attack on his natural rights to life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness, are absent from this institution. He is not forbidden certain walks and places of amusement, but may indulge in his innocent diversions under the indulgent smile of the upper classmen. Hazing, except in the College, has practically died out.

REPUBLICAN CLUB

On Thursday night, some twenty or twenty five student Republicans met and perfected the organization of the Republican club of the University of North Carolina. The officers elected are as follows: F. Nugent Cox, president; U. S. Jones, vice president; B. W. McCaskell, secretary; L. B. Gunter, treasurer; and W. R. Baugess, corresponding secretary. It will be the duties of the latter officer to be official correspondent to the Greensboro Daily News, the Tar Heel, and such other news organs as will keep their friends out in the state fully informed as to the work of the club at the University.
