Norfolk, Va., Oct. 12th, 1910.

The good results obtained by the Norfolk Southern Railroad from their display of the Carolina Coast Country products at the Ohio Valley Exposition, recently held at Cincinnati, has caused them to decide to participate in the Pittsburg Land Show. This Land show will be held at Pittsburg, Pa. for two weeks, beginning October 17th and closing the 29th.

As was demonstrated at the Cincinnati show, the rich lands along the Mississippi Valley, even the very lands of the Mississippi delta could not produce products equal to that shown by the Norfolk Southern Railroad. Corn, oats, potatoes, apples, alfalfa and many other valuable and staple products from the Norfolk Southern territory were, in quality, superior to the exhibits from other portions of the country, and not only attracted the attention of interested Middle West farmers, but also won the highest approbation of the entire country.

In addition to the display of these products it has been arranged to give stereoptican lectures illustrated by lantern views showing many attractive farming scenes along the road. A large number of photographs have been secured showing the country and its possibilities, and by means of these photographs it is proposed to throw on the lecture room screen exact reproductions of plain farming facts, as they exist in the Carolina Coast Country.

Valuable results are sure to come from this energetic plan of advertising by the Norfolk Southern Railroad Company, and the prestige that will be attained by the railroad and its tributary country through its participation in this Middle West Exposition, will surely bring the country into greater prominence with the people from other states, and will help turn the tide of homeseekers into the attractive fields to be found from Norfolk southward along the lines of the Norfolk Southern Railroad.
