The Rhodes Scholarship Examinations

The Rhodes Scholarship examination for this state, which has been given in Raleigh this week, was taken by three North Carolina students—White of Davidson College, O. W. Hyman and E. W. Turlington of the University. The State committee on the Rhodes Scholarship examination is composed of Dr. F. P. Venable, chairman, Judge Walter Clark, and Superintendent J. Y. Joyner. The examination was conducted by Mr. A. J. Barwick, of the State Board of Education, in Superintendent Joyner's office. The three subjects in which the examination was given are Latin, Greek and Mathematics. The papers were mailed to Oxford immediately.

The man who secures the scholarship will go to England next October for a three years' course at Oxford University. The scholarship amounts to $4,500, which is considered enough to meet all expenses for three years.

DR. MIMS ADDRESSES STUDENTS

"A Life Work" Made the Subject of a Most Helpful Lecture. The Supreme Need of Christian Manhood

Dr. Mims' address on "A Man's Life Work," which was delivered in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Tuesday night, was a most inspiring and helpful lecture. It was a clean and forceful interpretation of the Christian life followed by an exhortation to choose a profession in which one might best live a Christian life. Dr. Mims' address was, in substance: "A Christian life is a life of expansion, progress, morality, and service. A man, in order to live a Christian life, must have not merely his moral nature developed, but his physical and intellectual powers as well. It is our duty to develop them, for unless we do, our moral capabilities will be impaired. A man who has never drunk or gambled is almost as culpable if he has neglected his physical and intellectual powers which would give him the maximum amount of efficiency. After a man has developed his talents he should proceed to use them. It is then that Christian life is a life of progress. Some men get out of college but get no further. Others only get halfway up the mountain or venture only a little way upon the sea of life. It is the highest and noblest type of man which does not stop climbing and going until he has explored the furthest limits of his capabilities. Progress distinguishes man from the beast. A beast's development and progress ends practically with the instinct which nature gives it while that of a man is endless.

"A Christian life is one of morality. Religion is morality with the Christian conception of man's relation to God and his fellow man added. Morality is necessary to religion and no amount of piety can atone for the absence of it. A Christian life is a life of service also. It is a life of whole hearted joyous service to our fellow man. We are all thinking about our life work. From a Christian point of view there is only one way to look at it. That is to choose from those pursuits in which we are most apt, that one in which we can best live the Christian life and serve our fellowmen. It is a common practice among promising young Southern men to choose the legal profession. The law offers many temptations for crooked practice. Some lawyers-not all-go to the extremity of even bribing juries and of manufacturing evidence. But of course this is not a necessary part of the profession. If you decide to practice law, take the Christian conception into the business with you and be guided by that.

Do whatever you can for your country and your fellowmen. The way of the true political leader is that of the cross. The way of the pagan political leader is too often that of wealth gained by dishonest means and of power won by foul methods. The development of the south is bringing many immoral forces into it as well as opening up new fields for men of ability. Here is a great harvest field for ministers. The South's increased attention to education opens up a vast field for teachers, and men of ability are needed. The field of medicine is one of the greatest fields for service. Choose any respectable profession and if you carry the Christian conception of life with you into it you will be successful."
