CAROLINA'S 1911 FOOTBALL TEAM

Fifty-five Men Answer the Coach's First Call for Candidates

TEN SWEATER MEN BACK IN COLLEGE

Abernathy, Applewhite, Belk, Deans, Manning, Venable and Winston Form the Nucleus About Which the 1911 Team Will Be Built

When at the beginning of the term Coach Bocock and Captain Winston issued their call for candidates for the 1911 Carolina football team about 55 men answered. Among the number were Abernathy, Applewhite, Belk and Venable of last year's team; Deans and Manning, sweater men and varsity of two years ago; and a large part of last year's scrub team, including Wakeley, Ritch, Crutchfield, Will Tillet, and Lenoir members, all five of whom made trips with the team last year and me near hustling some of the regulars out of their places. These players form a splendid nucleus with which to start work. Among the new material, which Coach Bocock will work in with the old ten, Coffin, all-State prep school quarter, Walton, Johnson, Erwin, quarter, Adernathy and Erwin, all back, stand out as giving promise of great development. There are no big "beefs" among either the old men or the new, although the men who answered the call are a husky looking bunch. The strength of the team will this year consist in speed and quickness, not in weight.

The past two weeks have been spent in gruelling preliminary practice, punting, falling on the ball, tackling the dummy, passing the ball. During the past few days different elevens have been picked and schooled in various plays. No scrimmage has taken place yet, but even now the fight for places is hot and fierce although a week will pass before men are picked for the different positions. This year, however, the men will be handled as a squad rather than as a team. Three or four men will be held in reserve for each position, and the team will be chosen from the squad before each game.

It is too early yet for the coach to make any definite statements concerning the team's prospects or make any claims. The team this year will consist not of prospects nor of South Atlantic stars. Nevertheless Bocock's skill and Winston's spirit will make for Carolina eleven men who will work as one machine and quit themselves worthy of the colors they wear. Winston is full of nerve, spirit, and enthusiasm, and is laboring hard for the success of the team. Bocock is well known in Southern football, where for several years he has coached strong teams to victory.

SCHEDULE

COLLEGE NIGHT A SUCCESS

New Men Initiated into the Ways of College Life. Winston Arouses Enthusiasm for the Team

The annual celebration of College Night was this year a great success. The untiring efforts of Secretary Hall and President Lockhart to make the occasion something more than an empty hullabaloo met with a fine response on the part of the students. An immense crowd of students was present in Gerrard Hall. The University song was sung with vigor and the yells given with a snap by the old men for the benefit of the new. The speeches were in the main good. Enthusiasm and college spirit ran high.

F. B. Drane, Vice President of the Y. M. C. A., presided over the meeting. Sandy Graham led the cheering.

After he had stated the purpose of the meeting, Drane introduced Bob Winston, captain of the 1911 football team, as the first speaker. Winston spoke on athletics, and his stirring talk aroused more enthusiasm than anything else during the evening. As was natural he confined himself almost exclusively to football, and especially to the season about to open. He thanked the student body for its loyalty to the team in the past, and asked that the dauntless Carolina loyalty continue. But he asked for something more than loyalty—for the faith and confidence of the students in the team's ability to win.

R. A. Freeman who followed Winston spoke on the honor system.

TENNIS ASSOCIATION MEETS

The Report of the President Shows the Association to Be in Good Condition

A meeting of the Tennis Association was held Thursday afternoon. The president made a brief report in which he said that there was about $100 in the bank to the credit of the association, and that he had twice written last year's treasurer but had as yet received no answer. Election of officers followed. Speight Hunter was elected president, and Fields Euliss treasurer. Both men are members of the Junior class. An effort was made to reduce the membership fee from $1.50 to $1.00, but this, after considerable debate, failed. It was decided to use the amount in the treasury for the erection of four new courts if the proper arrangements could be made with the University authorities.

Callie Little, '14, was initiated into the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity Tuesday night.

Oct. 21—Davidson at Charlotte.
Oct. 28—U. S. S. Franklin at Durham or Chapel Hill.

Nov. 4—V. P. I. at Richmond, Va.

Nov. 11—University of South Carolina, at Chapel Hill.

Nov. 18—Washington and Lee at Norfolk.

Nov. 30—University of Virginia at Richmond, Va.

HOW THE FACULTY SPENT THE SUMMER

An Account of the Many Things Done by the Faculty

THREE PROFESSORS RETURN FROM EUROPE

Few Changes Made in the Faculty During the Summer. Dr. W. H. Brown is Added to the Department of Medicine

The faculty will remain about the same as last year, only a very few new men being added as compared with the sweeping changes at the beginning of last session, owing to the loss of so many old professors.

The most important acquisition to the ranks of the faculty is Dr. Wade Hampton Brown, who is to be professor of pathology. Dr. Brown took a B. S. from the University of Nashville in 1899, attended the University of Chicago, took an M. D. from Johns Hopkins in 1907, was instructor in the University of Virginia in 1907-08, instructor in the University of Wisconsin 1908-10, and assistant professor of pathology in the last named university last session.

Mr. D. Huger Bacot, Jr., of Charleston, S. C., will be instructor in history. Mr. Bacot took an A. B. from Charleston University in 1907, was assistant in English there 1907-08, and took an A. M. from Harvard in 1909. He is now doing work for a Ph. D. from Harvard.

Mr. John Wayne Lasley will be instructor in mathematics. Mr. Lasley took an A. B. from the University of North Carolina in 1910 and an A. M. from the University in 1911.

The professors have passed the vacation in various ways. That the faculty, speaking collectively, has by no means been idle in the summer months may be seen from a partial account of how some of the leading members passed the time. Many have labored a good part of the summer just as hard as during the college session, pursuing advanced studies in order to make themselves still more fit to guide the sons of the State through the mazes of the higher learning. No less than three have just returned to resume their duties after a year's leave of absence in Europe, while three others have made flying trips to Europe during the summer. A university is, after all, only so strong as its faculty, and the account following speaks for itself as to the State university's place in the progressive march of modern education.

President Francis P. Venable spent the summer in Chapel Hill working laboriously to enable the university to make the greatest possible expansion with the means at its disposal.

Dr. Archibald Henderson has just returned from a year's leave of absence in Europe, where he was when his life of Bernard Shaw was published, which is, perhaps, the most discussed book of the day. He has been making

POLITICS HAS ITS DAY

The Elections in the Various Classes Pass Off Smoothly. Juniors Pass Resolutions of Respect

The Senior class held its meeting Friday afternoon. The following officers were elected:

R. A. Freeman, president; A. W. Graham, Jr., vice-president; W. D. Barbee, secretary and treasurer; A. H. Graham, Historian; P. H. Gwyn, Prophet; John Whitaker, Writer of Last Will and Testament; Blake Isley, statistician; Claude Teague, orator; F. B. Drane, class representative; T. M. Price, manager football team.

It was a serious body of Juniors that convened in chapel last Saturday at 2:15 p. m. Their thoughts were with the dead, and the note of huskiness in the voice of the speaker, as he read the following resolutions, and deep silence among the members of the class were significant of the position young Buckley occupied in the minds and hearts of his comrades:

The class of 1913 left the University in June with the joy and happiness that the thoughts of vacation bring. Little did the members think that ere the time for assembling again one of their number should be taken away. But God, in his infinite wisdom, saw fit to take to Himself our classmate and friend, Melvin Buckley, Buckley whom we admire, Buckley whom we respected and loved. Upon coming back to the University each member of 1913 is saddened that Buckley is

117TH YEAR OF THE UNIVERSITY BEGINS

Increased Enrollment Gives Bright Outlook for the Year

760 STUDENTS HAVE REGISTERED TO DATE

Formal Opening Takes Place in Memorial Hall. President Venable Explains the Internal Order of Things at the University;

Thursday morning, September 14th, began another year in the history of the old University. Seniors and freshmen, juniors and sophomores and professional students—all in an indiscriminate confusion and bustle hurried about the campus attempting to meet their classes. At 9:25, the usual hour, chapel service was held. Once more students filed into Gerrard Hall, sang a song, listened to a short prayer, and a few earnest words from the president—and the year was started anew.

The formal opening of the University took place, however, as is customary, in Memorial Hall at 12:30. Only academic students are required to go to chapel, but every student is expected to be at Memorial Hall for the opening. Nearly 800 students were present. The sea of faces looked almost like a commencement crowd.

Only one address was made at the opening, that by President Venable. The purpose of such formal opening was, Dr. Venable said, to give the President opportunity to explain certain things about the University. The President did not enter into the details of the regulations, but his address touched many things that come close to student life. He spoke of the increase in the number of students, and said it was due largely to the enthusiastic labor of students. For the continuance of this good work the hearty, loyal co-operation of the students is necessary. The President spoke of the individual responsibility that rested upon each student, and he urged the careful attendance by each student of the daily duties. He spoke of the University and begged most earnestly that among the new students a great love for the University might grow up—that they might watch well her interests.

Dr. Venable further spoke of the general internal order here and of the rules governing conduct. He said that the University published no decalogue of sins wherein the crimes of a student might be tabulated. The simple rules: "You are expected to be a gentleman—in the high sense of the word—and to obey the laws of the State" were all that governed in this institution. He urged the new students to get into the life of the University. To those interested in spiritual things he referred the Y. M. C. A. The literary societies to those who debated, dramatic club to those who could act, the gymnasium and athletic fields to the
