If there is one separate characteristic which may be said to be peculiar to students of this University, that characteristic is the inveterate habit of being behind time. All of the students don't go to Pickwick, for obvious reasons, all of them don't smoke, just a few make a perpetual performance of falling on work, few drink of the cup that clears today of past regrets and future fears, while to play poker is granted only to a select number of the elect. But to be ten minutes behind time is given in abundance and unto all of us.

The poor students are not to blame. It's, the environment. Things begin to get behind time just as soon as the students land at University Station. They have to wait there an awfully long time. Then things begin to get more behind time as soon as they start for the land of beefsteak and grits. And things get slower and more behind time the nearer they get to Chapel Hill until finally Old Henry's Waterbury caps things off.

Nothing is ever on time save eight-thirty classes. Who can expect a poor student to be on time? Most of us would be painfully surprised if we found ourselves within approximately fifteen minutes of an appointed time. It would be so unusual, and would be certain to attract unfavorable comment. Slowness and deliberation give one a certain amount of dignity and steadiness anyway. It cures impatience,-but all the same a whole lot of profanity would be conserved if students who have to have group pictures made would try to arrive within a half hour of the time set.

The plan which the cheer lead ers have devised for the practice of our songs and yells is a good one; and, if carried out, will bring resuits at the game. Nothing tells like the boom of organized cheering. Some deny this, but the members of the team say it is so, and we are willing to take their word for it. To get just this organization is what the cheer leaders are trying to do. The object of the whole business is to unite the enthusiasm and support of the students into one solid mass so that it may be our team and strengthen the California.

The plan suggested will do this very thing. But it will not do it unless it is consistently carried out by all of the students. For one time, just for one time, let's get the grouch out of our system, let's forget just once that we may actually be caught doing something, let's organize ourselves so that we will be just half as efficient on the side lines as our team is going to be on the field.

Doing honor to the memory of one of North Carolina's early Governors, there was yesterday presented to the State by the with the performance. North Carolina Society of the Sons of the Revolution, a hand- The Royal Cafe and Restaurant some oil portrait of Governor Benjamin Smith, of Brunswick county, who a hundred years ago, in 1810 and 1811 was the Chief exercises of the presentation took place in the hall of the House of Representatives, beginning at noon, where there was gathered a large number of members of the North Carolina Society of the of the Revolution and many other citizens, present to take part in the interesting exercises, there being a number of young people among those some of the students of Meredith College interested in the history of the State.

The meeting was called to order by Hon. J. Bryan Grimes, Secretary of State and the newly elected president of the North Carolina Society of the Sons of the Revolution; and following this there was prayer by Rev. Robert Brent Drane, D. D., of Edenton, chaplain of the society. The introduction of the orater of the day was by President Grimes and the address, a most eloquen and able one in which there was a careful review of the life and career of Gov. Smith, was by Professor Collier Cobb, a distinguished member of the faculty of the University of North Carolino and a member of the society The portrait was accepted for the State by Governor William Wal ton Kitchin, who in so doing spoke eloquently of the value to the State and its people of portraits of men who have neld positions of trust and honor in the State - News and Observer.
