Class Track Teams Organize

On Tuesday afternoon of last week a meeting of the student body was held in the Chapel to see if there could be some way found of bringing out more men to work for places on the track team. Coach Cartmell called the meeting to order and told of the difficulties that he was having, owing to there being a scarcity of material out for track work. He said that unless more men come out that he could not possibly get out the team that we should have.

After this he turned the meeting over to Mr. Gus Graham, under whose chairmanship a remedy for the situation was evolved. It was decided to have four class track teams—one for each of the four classes in the Academic Department.

The men trying for places on the class teams are to go out upon the Varsity track with the regular squad and train under Coach Cartmell, who will give them the same care and consideration that he expends on the Varsity men. Then, when the class men have been rounded into shape, there will be a class field day at which prizes will be given to the winners of the different events. A committee was appointed by the chairman of the meeting to solicit these prizes from the merchants in town. This committee was composed of Messrs. Burgess, chairman, Barker, Boushall, Applewhite, and Carlton.

Every member of each class—except those who have received track N. C.'s—will be eligible for his class track team. The track N. C. men were debarred because it was thought that they

Hatchet Buried in Turkey Breast

At a banquet in which Marse Jesse outdid himself, forty-eight Juniors last Friday night gathered around creaking tables and during the pauses of the Mexican athletes in display of their powers, buried the hatchet in abundance of oyster cocktails, quail on toast, and turkey breast. President R. O. Huffman acted as toastmaster. The class had as its guests, Prof. Graham, Dr. Edwin Mims, Prof. Stacy, and "Doc" Klutz.

Prof. Bernard had been invited to attend, but was unable to do so. In his place Dr. Klutz was called on for a speech. He made a short talk, expressing his pleasure at being present. Robert Strange, Jr., responded.

The toastmaster next introduced Dr. Mims. The speaker, after a few moments of diverting pleasantries, came to his subject, which was "College Spirit." "College spirit," he said, "is a creative energy that comes from the thought of your alma mater."

It is the result of old association and a feeling of comradeship. It is the brotherhood that comes from being classmates. "Dearly as I love the University, I could never have for it the same feeling that Prof. Stacy or Prof. Graham have. Here as boys they found themselves and came to manhood. Here are the things they care for."

"I esteem it one of the privileges of my life," said Dr. Mims, to have lived here and shared the life of the University. It is worthy of your utmost loyalty and faith. Its library, scientific equipment, and academic course are the best in the South. Its college spirit that in the lobby of the Jefferson Hotel cheered to the echo a defeated team a year ago is full-blooded, magnificent. It has been not only a privilege but also a joy to have been here, to have associated with the people, to have walked in the surrounding woods. Then why do I go? It is the call of my alma mater."

In response M. T. Spears made an earnest talk on the value of having a definite purpose in life.

Dean Graham, the next speaker, spoke on the absolute necessity of the class getting together and preparing to make next year some contribution to campus life. "Next year," he said, "you will be seniors. Be sure you keep open the windows of your soul." He warned the class against doing things through prejudice, and against planning some great thing of the future without doing the things that come to hand. By working in some common cause the class would become united and leave behind it a proud record.

W. R. Petteway, in response, spoke of the opportunity in college for development socially and politically.

Prof. Stacy spoke mainly about good roads. He advocated progressiveness and the use of bond issues. A. L. Hamilton, the last scheduled speaker, urged the class to get together, forget all Prom talk, and unite in making the reception a success.

Impromptu speeches of Wiggins and Stokes showed the sentiment of the class to be to unite and act as a solid unit.

are so much better in this department than the other members of the class that if they were allowed to compete the events would be too one-sided to be interesting.

Committees from each class were appointed to look after the organizing of the class team in their particular class.

A strict enforcement of the rules governing conditions at the University of Pennsylvania is said to have played an important part in the poor showing of their 1911 football team.

Dr. George Harris has tendered his resignation as President of Amherst College. Advancing years are assigned as the reason for his resignation.
