Bishop Robert Strange on Mission Study

Bishop Robert Strange addressed a meeting held in the Chapel Monday night March 3 for the purpose of inaugurating the Mission Study Movement which is to be conducted by the Y. M. C. A. this spring. Bishop Strange considered the Missionary Movement from the viewpoint of what we get out of it. The following is a summary of his address:

"The Missionary Movement is now world-wide. It is beneficial both to those who send out missionaries and to those who receive them. We, the givers, get back in proportion as we give just as those to whom we send missionaries receive in proportion as we send. And since it is more blessed to give than to receive we if we give in good spirit are more benefited than those to whom we give.

"In a material way our country derives great advantages from our part in the Missionary Movement. The missionary opens up the country to trade and commerce. He creates demands for material things which the home country supplies. Also the missionary in opening up a new country contributes vastly to science and to the general knowledge of the world for which his country receives credit with him. The English missionaries who opened up Africa gained honor for themselves and trade and glory for their country. Lastly, each one who even gives a small piece of money has a consciousness of having done a good deed, a service for humanity. Such a little thing enables us to participate in the great work of bringing Christianity to the poor, unenlightened and unchristian peoples. It gives us the happiness which is the basis of the expression, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

After the conclusion of Bishop Strange's address Mr. Hall announced that the following courses in mission study would be offered by the Y. M. C. A.

1. Problems of the American city. A course of lectures on this subject by Prof. A. H. Patterson.
2. Decisive Hour of Christian Missions. The above text book by John R. Mott will be studied in groups.
3. Negro Life in the South. This text book will be studied in groups also.
