Dr. Louis R. Wilson, Editor of the Alumni Review, wants kodak pictures of interesting scenes around the University. For every picture accepted he will pay one dollar. Dr. Wilson is particularly anxious to get some good pictures of the exercises on University Day, the procession, for instance. A snapshot of a football scrimmage, of the tennis courts, or of anything interesting on the campus suitable to go in the Alumni Review is what he wants. Amateur photographers, here's your chance!

Carolínians Can Make Good

To the Editor of the TAR HEEL: North Carolínians are the equals of any other Americans. In every work to which they turn their hands and thought and courage, their value is as high and their attainments as notable as those of any other Americans. They are as "good" as any body else.

The activity in which there now appears a necessity for a reassertion of this truth is Carolina athletics-especially football which has been unsatisfactory to students and alumni, who demand, among other things, of their teams that they win. The result is that some of the students have been discouraged and have lost confidence in themselves as athletes and in the teams they could make up from among themselves.

Some of them made the mistake of trying a quack remedy. The fact that it was a mistake for them to try the remedy which they did try, can be established without any consideration of the right or wrong, the fairness or unfairness to Carolina's opponents, which were involved. Sober thought should have condemned this supposed remedy before it was tried for the single reason that it was unnatural. All quack (unnatural) remedies fail. It is unnatural for a clean, self-governing, self-helping community of student North Carolínians to hire yersons to do their football or baseball playing--their work on their representative teams--for them. It would be unnatural for North Carolínians to hire persons to do their governmental work at Raleigh or their representative work in Congress. Hired soldiers win few big battles.

The one thing needed is for Carolina students to come back to the realization that, from standpoint of strength, of skill and of courage, they are the peers of any other Americans. This done and it is inevitable Carolina teams will "come back."

Lawyers Smoke

Following the example of the Seniors, the Lawyers assembled Monday night for a frank discussion of University problems and for the purpose of devising ways and means for the betterment of campus conditions. The problems of the University in its present crisis were discussed frankly and freely with a view to the improvement of the things that are. It was the unanimous opinion of the class that the law students as a rule did not take as active a part in the University as its interests and their own demanded. It was resolved to change this course in the future.

The discussion centered largely around hazing as the chief problem confronting the University. It was the spirit of the meeting that hazing should be abolished and to this end the Law School wishes to lend its support, both by spreading a sentiment condemning it and cooperating with the authorities in enforcing the rules against it. President Warlick, Councilman Graham, and Messers Johnston, Martin, Stacy, Hester, and others figured in the discussion. Professor McGehee and McIntosh were present and both made talks. Prof. McGehee spoke on the Faculty's position in regard to the government of the University. Prof. McIntosh spoke on law enforcement, which, he said, in its last analysis was an individual matter. Mr. Alexander, who had taken an active interest in the propositions for the meeting closed with an eloquent speech. The refreshments and the discussion were enjoyed by every one. The meeting took final form in the appointment of a committee to draw up a set of resolutions embodying the sentiment of the class.
