SCHOLARSHIP TO BE AWARDED SENIOR BY NATIONAL CITY BANK

Scholarship Carries Salary of $1,500 and Expenses—John Washburn Last Year's Recipient.

OPPORTUNITY TO TRAVEL

Announcements concerning the National City Bank Scholarships have just been forwarded to Dr. D. D. Carroll, dean of the School of Commerce. Scholarships this year are restricted to members of this year's senior class. Any senior is eligible to enter his name for election to one of these scholarships. Applications should be filed at once in the office of the School of Commerce.

The entrants to the college training class of the National City Bank of New York, who are those gaining scholarships, are chosen by the bank from men recommended by the faculty committees of American colleges and universities. A faculty committee usually representing the economic or business administration of the school, is generally designated. Dr. Carroll is chairman of the University committee for the recommendation of Carolina men. In general the bank regards a special aptitude for economics or political science to indicate the type of men whom it desires to recruit for its organization so far as class studies are concerned. However, it has been the practice to rely to a large extent on the recommendation of the faculty committees, reserving the matter of final selection to the bank. Finally, in choosing these men, three things are stressed—character, personality and scholarship. The class which will be formed to start July 1, 1921, will be limited to twenty seniors now preparing to graduate.

The training work begins immediately upon the arrival of the holders of the scholarships in New York on July 1. The men are assigned to various departments of the bank, not as observers, but as regular members of the department. Reports are made by the different department heads and a careful record of the work of each man is kept in order that a definite idea may be formed by the bank's officials of the particular phase of the bank's organization for which the man is best fitted. The men are rotated through the various departments on a definite schedule in order that they may obtain a complete idea of the work of the institution, an opportunity seldom open to the regular star of the bank.

FRESHMEN TAKE GAME FROM STATE IN NINTH

Coffey Wins Own Game by Timely Three Bagger With Three Men on Bases

"Specs" Coffey, twirling for Patterson's freshman aggregation, won his own ball game in the ninth inning against State College freshmen in Raleigh Tuesday afternoon, driving out a three base hit with the bases crowded, overcoming a 2-1 lead, and ending the game with a 5-3 victory.

Allen, for the State freshmen, and Coffey had engaged in a pitcher's duel, with Allen getting a little the best of it. Both pitched air tight ball. State's scores coming in the second and eighth frames, due partly to errors. In the ninth Patterson's clan began to solve Allen's hooks and two infield hits, a fielder's choice, Hodge's error, followed in rapid succession, filling the bases. It was at this point that Coffey smashed out his triple and later scored himself winning the game.

State freshmen scored in the second when Lassiter drove a home run over the left field wall, the longest hit on Riddick field this season. In the eighth Curtis' single Redfern's sacrifice, and a wild pitch by Coffey, netted the Raleigh first year men another tally.

Both teams played good, fast ball, and Coach Patterson of the local first year team feels pretty confident about prospects for the outcome of the northern trip that his team takes next week.

Dr. L. A. Williams of the Education Department spent the 15th and 16th in Roanoke Rapids, N. C., in conference with the superintendent and superiors of the Roanoke Rapids Schools. Dr. Williams presented the results of the recent survey as tabulated, classified and interpreted under his direction by the class in tests and measurements in the University.

Some Plans of Student Government As Described at Student Conference

Twenty-One of Forty-Six Eastern Institutions Represented at Massachusetts Have Student Government—Eleven Regard It as an Unqualified Success.

By Tyre C. Taylor.
(First of Three Articles.)

In this survey of a subject about which scarcely anything has been written up to the present time—and which might well fill volumes—I shall attempt to touch only those phases which seem to contain possibilities of usefulness to college student bodies everywhere and to leave to another time and place the many amusing and unique systems now in use in institutions of learning throughout the country.

There were, in all, represented at the conference which assembled at "Tech," the famous training point for engineers, chemists, and builders, located on the bank of the Charles River just across from Boston, forty-six of the leading colleges and universities east of the Rocky Mountains. Of these, twenty-one had student government in some form and of this twenty-one eleven expressed the belief that it was an unqualified success. Two colleges out of the eleven had student bodies numbering over five thousand. The construction of the governing body—which in practically every case was called a "student council"—depended in a large measure upon the size of the college and the number of departments which it contained. Where a college contained a large number of separate units or departments the tendency was to favor either independent councils for each department or a system by which each department was represented according to some rule of apportionment.

In one college the basis of representation was one representative in the lower house to each hundred students, but in the majority of cases the number to each representative was larger. In almost every instance the council or governing body bore the marks of, or was frankly modeled on, the federal government. At Vermont the faculty is the senate and the student council the lower house. We were told that here measures affecting the students might be originated in the upper house but that by far the larger number of recommendations came up from below, the faculty "senate" acting as the final authority on them.

The relative powers of the faculties of the various institutions came in for particular consideration. It was found that in an overwhelming percentage of cases the faculty had what amounted to the veto power with no recourse left the students to any higher power. North Carolina had the least interference from faculty control in its management of student affairs and was, before the conference closed, generally recognized to have the most advanced form of student government of any of the institutions represented. At Wisconsin this veto power was somewhat softened by the fact that some years ago the faculty made a regular grant of powers to the student body. This grant took the form of a charter and any subject which fell within its particular scope might be subject to final action by the student representative body. The powers contained in this grant, however, were disappointingly limited in their nature and in the end the students, even though holding a charter from the faculty, did not have self-government to the degree which existed in a number of other schools represented.

It is of interest to note here that in this large university where probably 50 per cent. of the undergraduate body is composed of women, the co-eds are not allowed to take any part in the direction of general college activities. Their governing body is entirely separate from that of the men and about all they do, as the Wisconsin man expressed it, is to participate in "tag selling" campaigns and they may hold places on the publications. Of course this is not to be construed to mean that here

FRESHMEN LEAVE ON TRIP NORTH MONDAY

To Play Some of The Strongest Prep School Teams in Old Dominion.

Probably the hardest baseball schedule that any University freshman baseball team has had will be carried out when the first year reserve team leaves May 1st for a week's trip into Virginia where they will play the strongest prep teams in the Old Dominion. Playing six consecutive days the team will meet the Fishburne Military School nine in Waynesboro on May 2nd, the Staunton Military Academy at Staunton, the Augusta Military Academy at Fort Defiance, the University of Virginia freshmen at Charlottesville, Woodberry Forrest at Woodberry and the Chatham Training School team at Chatham on May 7th, returning to the Hill the following day.

The men who will be taken on this trip have not definitely been decided upon, but the nine men which composed the team that defeated the strong Oak Ridge aggregation will undoubtedly be among those to take the trip. About sixteen men will make the trip, including Coach Fred Patterson and Manager Robert Proctor.

This week the freshmen will play the N. C. State freshmen in Raleigh. Two days afterwards, on April 28th, the N. C. State team will journey to Chapel Hill for a return game. One of the hardest contests of the season will probably take place on Saturday, April 30, when the freshmen take on the strong Oak Ridge team in Burlington. Last year's freshman team, which was thought to be probably the best one turned out at the University in many years, sustained the only defeat of the season at the hands of the Oak Ridge team in Burlington.

WOMEN STUDENTS DO GOOD WELFARE WORK

Have Assisted in Many Community Enterprises at Various Rural Communities in Adjacent Counties

Women students in connection with the Welfare Department have assisted in many community enterprises at various rural communities in Orange and Durham counties. Communities such as Orange Grove, Efland, Hillsboro, and Carrboro are visited as regularly as the weather and the Orange County roads permit, by community workers who lead community sings, make talks on subjects ranging from "How to Make an Iceless Refrigerator" to "Why You Should Wash Your Baby's Face," play games, tell stories to the school children, conduct health clinics, and outline tentative programmes for neighborhood projects.

Women active in this work have been Miss Beulah Martin, under whose direction the Efland Community Club has grown to include everyone in that neighborhood in some activity designed to widen and improve the life of the whole community; Miss Dora Taylor, who is keeping this work going since Miss Martin's departure; Miss Louise Williams, who is training the children for the commencement exercises of St. Mary's School near Hillsboro, also Misses Helen Richardson and Ellen Lay, who have held many community meetings in Orange Grove. Misses Bryant and Buchan make frequent visits to these communities. Miss Lucy M. Cobb has also spoken before the Efland Woman's Betterment Association. Miss Marion Crawford and Louise Williams have organized Girl Scouts at Carrboro and aided in supervising the Carrboro playground. In all these communities the most permanent results aimed at has been to develop home leadership that the organizations may not cease to function when the present workers are out of the field.

YACKETY-YACK TO BE ISSUED AT EARLY DATE

The Largest and Best Annual Ever Published at The University in Shipment Now.

The Yackety-Yack will soon be with us!

Manager Joe Erwin received word Tuesday that the shipment is on the way from the Baker, Jones, Hausauer company of Buffalo, the same company that put out the Yackety-Yack last year. This edition contains more pages than any other Yackety-Yack previously published.

President Hausauer, of the firm, Baker, Jones, Hausauer Company, recently wrote a friend of his in Chapel Hill who is in no way connected with the Yackety-Yack and stated that "in a few days the best Yackety-Yack ever printed would be shipped into North Carolina."

According to Manager Erwin no Yackety-Yack's bill fall due on the dents or others until all the class and other bills due the Yackety-Yack are paid. He would advise all Juniors and Seniors to add the Yackety-Yack bill to their monthly checks as the Yackety-Yack's bill fall due on the first of May. The Senior's space in the Yackety-Yack will amount to about $10 while the amount of the Junior's bill will be $3.50.

MANY OF THE ALUMNI ON THE HILL MONDAY

Alumni, Fathers and Mothers, and Many Girls Came to see Carolina-Virginia Game.

The Hill has just been the scene of more life and activity than has stirred the old campus for quite a while, over fifteen hundred visitors came up to see the Tar Heels put the finishing touches to Virginia last Monday. Old Alumni were around every where, looking the old place over, comparing notes of the good old days, and telling the boys how they used to run things. Those who are not so old were joining in old time "bull sessions" with their friends who are still in pursuit of the elusive A. B. or B. S., as the case may be, and giving them the advantages of their wide experience.

There were fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers, all coming up to see their young hopeful with the game as an excuse. Above all there were the girls, little girls, big girls, tall girls, short girls, fat girls, thin girls, but all pretty girls. These fair, colorful creatures bespotted themselves over the campus making the young man's fancy turn to thoughts of love, and bids to Finals were put out by the dozen. After the game many students and some of the visitors went to Durham to the Virginia-Carolina dance given at Lakewood Park.

If you haven't planned your summer vacation don't forget Blue Ridge. Go to the mountains June 14-24 and have the best time of your life.

Three Runs in Last 2 Innings When Score was 2-0 for Va. Spell Victory for Carolina

WILSON WHIFFS TEN MEN

Sweetman's Single Ties Score in 8th and C. Morris and Wilson Break up Game in Ninth

Captain "Lefty" Wilson, Sweetman and "Casey" Morris, shared the principal honors here Monday afternoon, when Carolina took the last game with Virginia by the score of 3-2, and made a clean sweep of the series. This is the first time in the history of the two institutions that either Carolina or Virginia has won all three games. The steady, clever pitching of Carolina's versatile captain, Sweetman's timely single in the eighth bringing in the tying score, and "Casey" Morris' triple in the ninth paving the way for the winning score, were the leading factors that led to Carolina's third victory over Virginia.

Wilson in Good Form.

"Lefty" Wilson, Carolina's southpaw, went in the game facing a handicap of eight right-hand batters, but he acquitted himself nobly. With the exception of the first and fourth innings when Virginia scored her runs, which were resultant mostly of slow fielding, Wilson was unshakable. At times he got in holes but in the pinches he was at his best, and he struck out ten of the Virginia hitters. The portside had a good day at the bat himself, getting two hits, one of them about the prettiest one base clout of the day, and driving in the winning run in the ninth with a long sacrifice fly.

Sweetman and Morris Do Damage.

After losing a fine chance to score in the lucky seventh, and suffering a two-run lead that Virginia had tucked away in the first two frames, Carolina came back strong in the eighth. Up to this point, Taylor, on the mound for Virginia, had pitched a wonderful game and had things practically his own way, but he grew wild in this frame. McLean and Fred Morris both drew passes, Spruill was out on foul bunt on last strike, Roseman, hitting for McGhee, drew another free ticket, and Sweetman came through with a clean single, scoring Morris and McLean ahead of him with the tying runs. In the ninth "Casey" Morris caught the first ball pitched squarely on the nose, driving it into deep center for three bases. Wilson followed with his sacrifice fly, scoring Morris and ending the Virginia series with three victories chalked up to the Tar Heels' credit.

Virginia First to Score.

For the first seven innings, in spite of Wilson's good pitching, it looked as if Virginia had the game sewed up, since her two runs came in the second and third frames. In the first Dunn, first man up for the visitors, grounded out to Wilson. Carrington got a nice single between second and third. Stauffer sacrificed Carrington, who had stolen second, to the third sack, and was out, McLean to Spruill. Tavenner received a pass, and Mahood, Virginia's only left-hand hitter, drove one through McDonald, who was slow in getting to it. The blow brought in Carrington with the first run of the game. In the third after Wilson had fanned Dunn, Carrington smashed out a three base hit. Wilson tightened and fanned Stauffer, but again presented Tavenner with a pass. Mahood was again up with two men down and Carrington resting on third, and Tavenner on first. He hit a slow one to Fred Morris, and beat it out, scoring Carrington. The Virginians threatened again in a number of instances but always Wilson came thru strong in the pinches, scattering his ten strike outs. The two-run lead looked good enough till Carolina's mighty rallies in the eighth and ninth.

Carolina played rather listless ball in the first few frames, not supporting Wilson like she usually does, and was unable to connect with Taylor's offerings. Virginia showed a reversal of form from her Greensboro exhibition, played fast, clean ball, and almost deserved to win. Carrington
