MODERN HOTEL TO BE ERECTED SOON

To Have Spacious Grounds and Will be Near New Railroad Station.

A modern hotel is to be built on the property where Mrs. Daniels' house now stands within the next six months. This will be the largest private enterprise that has been undertaken in Chapel Hill in several years. The hotel is to have all up-to-date equipment and will have rooms for about 200 guests.

The new station will be within a block of this place, and as soon as the tracks are laid, the trains will come up there to discharge passengers. With the hotel adjacent to the station there will be a need of stores. If the plans work out, construction will start next fall, and the hotel will be ready for business by next commencement.

There are to be large grounds around the hotel, which are to be laid out in walks. Tennis courts are also to be made. John Sprunt Hill, of Durham, is owner of this property, and will finance the building of the hotel.

ONE ARGUMENT AGAINST ROADS

One Catawba county farmer went to his polling place in the recent election and cast his ballot against the bond issue. N. W. Clark, who was working in the interest of roads at that place, spoke to the farmer and urged him to put in a vote for roads.

"It's this way," replied the farmer, "I live three miles from Hickory, own no automobile and have only a horse and wagon. I live on a fairly good road now and when I start to town, here comes an automobile honking behind me. I pull out on the side, the automobile passes, I get in the road again, and another one comes along. By the time I reach Hickory I have traveled five miles—three miles in the road and two miles pulling in and out going to or coming from Hickory. You can't make me believe that steps of the Co-ed who escorts her to her class in spite of the fact that she is a Co-ed.

At 4:30 she is apt to go back to her room—especially if it is a rainy day and she has bobbed hair. Her pace is considerably slower in the afternoons, so, instead of covering the distance between the University and her room in two and a half minutes, she takes at least twenty—perhaps 30. After powdering her nose and pulling a few curls into her hair she is ready to start out on her expedition to supper. This brisk walk gives her a fine appetite and she relishes boarding house fare. The final sprint of the day, after the evening meal and a sojourn to the Post Office, is a Home Run. The end of the activities of the busy Co-ed.

PROF. LOMAX TALKS ON COWBOY BALLADS

Large Student Audience is Delighted With Lecture of Texan Professor Here.

Carolina students were given an introduction to cowboy songs and ballads by Prof. John A. Lomax, of the University of Texas, in a lecture on "Cowboy Songs and Ballads," at Gerrard Hall Wednesday night.

Prof. Lomax was introduced to an audience by Dr. Archibald Henderson, the High School principal, who has been giving cowboy ballads than any other man in the world.

These cowboy ballads, according to Prof. Lomax, have sprung up from indigenous sources. Many of them were unwritten for a long time and were known only in the spoken form. Some have come to us in rude script form. Their origin cannot be determined.

"The more illiterate class of people is the source of some of the best of these ballads," said the speaker. Some of his best examples of the ballads he said he had learned from a negro porter who had spent his life on the ranch.

The social conditions which have given rise to these songs is significant at Carleton College. The people lived in the open, practically cut off from civilization. There being no newspapers, no magazines, and few visitors, they had to feed upon themselves for all their entertainment, and hence the rise of such songs.

Prof. Lomax explained each type of ballad, illustrating his remarks by reading of each type. He also delighted the audience by singing some of the ballads in the accent and style of original western ballad singers, urging the audience to join in the chorus. The genuine originality and originality of these ballads was especially pleasing to Prof. Lomax's hearers.

THE HAIR CUTTING BUSINESS

Have you been around, and seen the latest dope in town. Strange things have happened on the streets. Stranger things are happening. One of our Co-ed's has started a new style of heads. The barbers took a flop when she entered their barber shop; but they should have criticized because the Co-ed's 'em hypnotized. She seated her in a chair and said, "Cut my hair, you don't mind, clip it up high behind, take a little off the top, let it temple sort of drop."

We've been here for near a year but never before seen a Co-ed. But if something don't change have no doubt, they'll soon have a club called "Wearing 'Em Shorter." They are wearing hair shorter than the quarter, and the barbers in a strut, Co-ed's are having their hair cut. If women stop rolling their own, hair-cuts will be one bone. recruits are already on the job. In front of the shop, we see a man in a suit, we see a man in a suit, we see a man in a suit. "Please stop, men throw away your rettes, women remove hair nets."

It seems as there is no end to men trying to be like men, and soon if they have the chance, they'll be on the streets wearing pants. give up admit you're whipped. men are having their hair clipped.
