Hay-Shaker's Advance Dope Ran True to Form—He Admits He's Good.

RAMSON BROTHERS STAR

Tenche Coxe Makes Fast Time in Quarter and Half Mile Runs.

(By THE HAY-SHAKER)

With Carolina's band playing for the first time at a track meet, and before the largest crowd—1500—that ever witnessed a dual meet in the state, Bob Fetzer's track team whipped the much-touted State College squad by a score of 78 to 48 Friday afternoon.

It was a great contest. The hardest crew that the Carolina squad has met so far. But the Tar Heel team and its band which also had improved over past performances was equal to the occasion, and experienced little difficulty in disposing of a team that one of the state papers proclaimed as a 15 point winner in the meet.

Undoubtedly it was the best track meet, from every viewpoint, that has been held in North Carolina. And as a result, one more state record was broken. No, it wasn't the javelin record; it was the pole vault. And Lacy Ranson, a member of North Carolina's Royal track family, is the holder of the new record of 11 feet 5 1/2 inches.

Was the Hay-Shaker's Dope Spilled?

The Hay-Shaker, the Tar Heel track reporter—had just as good a day as the track team. Last Tuesday he predicted that Carolina would win firsts in the 440, 880, one mile, 220 low hurdles, broad jump, javelin, pole vault and one of the dashes. He predicted that State College would win first places in the two mile, the high jump, discus, shot-put, high hurdles, and one of the dashes—most likely the 100.

As the meet ran off, the Hay-Shaker lost out in only one event, the high jump. He would not have lost here if State College officials had measured Satterfield's jump in the Davidson meet correctly. They measured it from the stands instead of the middle of the bar and that made a difference of some five inches. As for the javelin throw, the tie result could hardly be considered a "faux pas" in his dope. When all the results were in, Carolina had eight first places marked up to State's six, and that was what he predicted for the meet.

LAUNDRY SEEKS HIGHER EFFICIENCY IN ITS WORK

417,425 Pieces Laundered Last Quarter—Paulsen Looks to Raleigh Conference for New Ideas.

That the laundry is an efficient and a very systematically operated institution on the campus is generally recognized, but the extent of this efficiency is not so generally known. Just to get an idea, the superintendent, Mr. Paulsen, tells us that during last quarter he laundered 417,425 pieces of work, or 32,901 pieces per week, and on several thousand pieces of this work he found it necessary to sew buttons. The fact that the University Laundry turns out more work according to the size of its working force than any other laundry in the state is almost undisputable. The office force keeps a set of records of the most minute transactions and their system of bookkeeping is just as efficient and modern as most any bank.

Superintendent Paulsen says that he is at all times seeking some way to increase efficiency and cut his rates at the same time. For this purpose he expects to go to Washington, D. C., on May 10 to attend the first regional convention of the National Laundry Association. Here he will have an opportunity to investigate and study several new systems which are undergoing thorough tests now. He will go to Raleigh next Tuesday where he will meet delegates from laundries over the state to discuss several new systems which are proving highly satisfactory in North Carolina.

WEIL LECTURES RECEIVE PRAISE FROM AUDIENCE

Fabian Franklin Stimulates Thought in the Field of American Citizenship.

The Weil lectures for 1923 are now a matter of history. Mr. Fabian Franklin has received high commendation from his hearers for the messages that he brought, and although his audiences were small he has stimulated much thought in the field of the particular phases of American citizenship which he presented.

The second lecture was entitled "The Function of Leadership," and was restricted to the representative type of government. To be a leader in a democracy Mr. Franklin holds that one must be a spokesman of the people and at the same time trust to his own opinion. He pointed out three men as embodying the essentials of leadership in the field of action: Theodore Roosevelt, Wilhelm II, and King Edward.

"Will a true representative," he said, "take a stand without consulting his constituents? He surely should not completely disregard them; neither is he under any kind of pledge to them. His clear cut convictions and unbiased opinion should not be sacrificed to the will of those whom he represents. Much less should he succumb to the apparent desires of his constituents."

Mr. Franklin called attention to the initiative and referendum, and the reasons for their failure. "There has long been a discontent for representative government, and not without foundation. The initiative and referendum would have made everything subservient to the will of the masses, and would have been the most perfect form of democracy. Its cardinal fault was the lack of any personal responsibility, which is of supreme moment at times. It would be folly to leave to the moods of the people such questions as foreign relations, and monetary values and standards. Men in our government must be allowed to use their own judgment. Even the act of obstruction, so annoying at times in parliamentary bodies, has its virtues."

In the last lecture, entitled "The Spirit of Liberty," Mr. Franklin showed that the rule of the people, founded on reason and liberty as it is, is capable of degenerating into tyranny. He used the 18th Amendment as an example of this, showing how it destroys the liberty of both the individual and the states. "You may say that any government entails the sacrifice of personal liberty. True enough, to an extent; but the 18th amendment attempts to destroy moral freedom too."

"The real danger to the spirit of liberty," he concluded, "arises from a desire for greater perfection. This desire is perfectly legitimate in itself, but it goes too far. The attention is centered on minor imperfections, and the great underlying principles are forgotten."

Prof. B. B. Kendrick, of Columbia University, made an address to students interested in history last Thursday morning in Saunders Hall. He spoke on the South's political stand during the Civil War. The Professor defended the South in its belief in State's Rights, but pointed out the weakness of its stand in regard to slavery.

W. A. White, of the Reading Iron company, Reading, Pa., read an interesting paper to the Civil Engineering Society recently on the manufacture of steel and wrought iron.

WHO'LL MAKE COVETED GOLDEN FLEECE? TAR HEEL REPORTER PICKS 'EM

Doping Likely Candidates Difficult Task—Hon. John J. Parker Will Speak at Tapping.

MAY 18th IS THE DATE SET

(By J. M. SAUNDERS)

The "tapping" of men for the Golden Fleece—the greatest honor that is bestowed upon Carolina men as students—will be held on Friday night, May 18th, in Memorial Hall. As yet there has been no definite announcement as to who will deliver the address for the occasion. Hon. John J. Parker, however, has been extended an invitation to speak at the annual affair. Mr. Parker is an old Fleece man himself, having been a student here some years back. He is the acknowledged leader of the Republican party in the state and is one of the most brilliant men in North Carolina.

The Senior Order of the Golden Fleece is the one thing that all Carolina men covet and accept as the greatest achievement for any son of Carolina. Every year there is much interest in the student body as to who will be picked for this honor, and speculation runs wild long before the time for the "tapping."

Each year it has been the custom of the Tar Heel to pick as near as possible the final selection, or at least to mention the most likely candidates for the honor. This is a very difficult job. In picking winners of first places in a track meet or something of that nature the task is altogether different. In view of these conditions it is with much hesitancy that we try to make the selection.

In the first place the Golden Fleece usually picks men who stand out in some campus activity very prominently. The usual number is ten, and so with this in mind we start out our uncertain list.

After thinking of all the men who would be possibilities for the Fleece, it seems the best way to make the selection would be to get men who would correspond as nearly as possible with last year's choice. The men "tapped" last year were as follows: A. M. McDonald, C. U. Smith, C. L. Moore, J. J. Wade, C. C. Poindexter, C. M. Llewellyn, V. V. Young, E. E. Rives, M. W. Nash and A. M. McGee.

"Monk" McDonald was picked last year as an all-round athlete. In looking for a man who can most satisfactorily fill such a general requirement, our attention is at once brought upon "Casey" Morris. Here is a man who has been honored by captaincies in two major sports—an honor that occurs very rarely. As star end on the varsity football team for the past two seasons he won a place on the mythical All-South Atlantic team both years. At the end of this season he was chosen to succeed Grady Pritchard as captain of the Carolina eleven. This year it is the "mighty Casey" who captains our baseball nine. In scholarship "Casey" ranks well for a man who has as much time taken up as he has. Certainly he cannot be overlooked in the Fleece "tapping."

Taking them up in order, C. U. Smith was chosen on account of his scholarship, being president of Phi Beta Kappa last year. This year's president of the honorary scholarship fraternity is G. E. Newby. It is generally thought (Continued on page three)

TAR HEELS WILL MEET STIFF OPPOSITION WHILE MAKING TOUR OF SOUTH

Fetzer's Men Will Meet Georgia Bull Dogs Tomorrow in Second Game of Trip.

MERCER ON THURSDAY

With the Battle of Tuscaloosa, the second conflict of Carolina's Southern invasion, a thing of the past, Fetzer and Morris will lead their warriors against the Georgia Bulldogs at Athens tomorrow afternoon. Coach Bill White has filled the vacancies in his line-up due to the absence of Rawson, Cody, Hutcheson, and McWhorter in satisfactory manner, and the Blue and White will find no uncertain quantity in the Red and Black machine. After the Athens contest, the Tar Heels encounter Mercer at Macon, Thursday, and Georgia Tech at Atlanta, Friday and Saturday.

This is the first regular Southern trip taken by a Carolina team in several years. On this tour through Dixie, Coach Bill's outfit is playing some of the strongest nines in the entire South. The University of Alabama has sent more finished players to the big leagues than any other institution below the Mason-Dixon line. Coach Bernier has some performers on his team this spring that are expected to compare favorably with Luke and Joe Sewell, Riggs Stephenson, Del Pratt, and all the rest of Alabama's diamond luminaries in professional baseball. "Red" McMillan is regarded as the best looking pitching prospect that has appeared at Tuscaloosa in many years, and Gillis, at shortstop, is a clever player.

Georgia has a capable pitching staff composed of Sale, Chambers, and Pantone. Sale and Pantone worked in the game here last spring when Carolina subdued the fighting Bulldogs 9 to 6. Chambers held the strong Fort Benning outfit to three hits early in the season, but lost the contest by a 3 to 2 score. Power has succeeded Rawson behind the bat and Thomason is holding down Cody's old place at the initial sack.

Mercer is perhaps the weakest team on the Carolina schedule. Smith, Wilkes, and Harper, members of the Baptists' quintet for two years, are participating in the national pastime with the Macon aggregation. Georgia Tech won from Mercer in a one-sided 9 to 2 contest, while the latter was previously defeated, 4 to 0, with Sheridan twirling for the Tigers. Fetzer, Moore, and Bryson will do the bulk of the mound work for Coach Fetzer's team. This trio can be depended on in the pinches to come through with the goods, and from present indications, the pitching problem has been largely solved. Shirley and McDonald have been swatting the horsehide effectively for the last few games and promise to continue the deadly work.

A CORRECTION

C. C. Poindexter, president of the "Y," asks that a correction be made to the statement published in last Tuesday's issue of the Tar Heel to the effect that the Y. M. C. A. cabinet elected new officers for next year. "The student body elected the officers, as everybody who voted knows," said Mr. Poindexter, "and the cabinet merely suggested nominations."

Miss Virginia Bryant has been confined to the infirmary for the past several days. Her condition is not serious and it is hoped that she will be out again in a short while.

BREEZY TALK MADE BY CYCLONE MACK IN CHAPEL

Volcanic Evangelist Provides Pleasure for His Audience with Comments on His Life and Work.

A rather unusual pleasure was visited on the chapel attendants Thursday morning when Rev. B. F. McLendon appeared with a very vigorous speech. Mr. McLendon is an evangelist of the Billy Sunday type, who has won the sobriquet of "Cyclone Mack" because of his breezy and volcanic manner of speaking. He hails originally from somewhere in South Carolina, near Bennettsville. He compares himself now, however, to the "Cyclone Mack" because of his high type, and who, deprived of this dog by death, contents himself by stating that "the bow-legged fice on which I feed is home sweet home to me."

The speaker gave an interesting account of his first sermon, and the consequences thereof. "I had spent some time in a preacher factory," he said, "and I was notified one night that I was to preach. In preparing my sermon I did not confine myself to the Bible, but gleaned happy thoughts from all the major and minor poets, historians and writers of all times. I had the sermon all fixed up with wet and dry climaxes."

"I went to the little church arrayed in a long coat, high beaver and white vest, and entered upon my maiden sermon grandly. I progressed well enough until I found that I had omitted one of my wet climaxes. Then I went back and tried to work up to it again, and spoiled the whole thing."

He then pointed out that the cause for his failure was a lack of enthusiasm, and that he determined to be sincere at least. He drew many illustrations of the value of enthusiasm from the Bible, and one or two from elsewhere. "In my boyhood I was fond of playing with turtles," he said. "Often they would draw in their head, legs and tail and refuse to move. Then I was accustomed to place a hot fire coal upon his back just about where the suspenders would have crossed, and action resulted."

"There are those who disfavor sensationalism," he continued. "I was never accustomed to standing in the pulpit and preaching to benches and varnish. A sensationalist is one who is doing something that other people cannot do, and of whom they are jealous. That is why they are universally disliked."

E. W. Zimmerman, of the Department of Commerce, left last Sunday for New Orleans where he will attend the National Conference of Collegiate Instructors of Foreign Steel. This conference will begin tomorrow and will last through Saturday. Professor Zimmerman will be the official delegate of the University of North Carolina at the Foreign Trade Commission which will hold its meeting at the same time. On Saturday all those present at the conference will attend the formal opening of the new harbor of the port of Orleans. On the way back from New Orleans the Professor will stop at Atlanta and Birmingham to study the general conditions at these two cities.

6,500 Damp But Eager Spectators See Virginia Go Down in Defeat at Cone Park Saturday.

VIRGINIANS FIGHT HARD

Doubles by Shirley and Morris Give Tar Heels Needed Run For Brilliant Victory.

Virginia was unable to solve the offerings of Bill Ferebee in the annual Greensboro classic at Cone Park Saturday afternoon, and emerged from a thrilling 2 to 1 contest defeated for the seventh time in succession. The game was delayed an hour by the antics of Jupiter Pluvius, and playing was suspended a few minutes in the first inning on account of an untimely April shower. The remaining eight rounds were played without interruption and 6,500 damp but enthusiastic spectators, the largest number ever witnessing a tussle in the Gate City, were treated to an exhibition of air-tight baseball, featured by the brilliant fielding of both teams and opportune hitting on the part of the Tar Heels.

Pitching his first complete game for Carolina, Ferebee was master of the situation at all times and allowed the Virginians but four scattered hits. In the sixth inning, after an error, fielder's choice, an infield single had filled the bases, the youngster shattered Old Dominion hopes of forging ahead when he calmly struck out the veteran Holland on four pitched balls. Ferebee sent the Orange and Blue batters back to the bench in one, two, three order no less than six times and fanned four men.

Carolina's first tally came in the third frame when McDonald led off with a long drive to left center that was good for three bases had it not been for the ground rules. The speedy little short-came home when "Rabbit" Bonner doubled into the right field crowd. Shirley was safe at first while Holland was throwing Bonner out at the hot corner, but Morris hit an easy fly to Foster, ending the slaughter.

LOCATION OF WOMAN'S BUILDING DECIDED UPON

Site of Old Eben Alexander Home Will Be the Future Retreat of the Fair Co-eds.

The University building committee at a recent meeting selected the site of the old Eben Alexander home, next to the Episcopal church on the east side, as the location of the woman's building for which the executive committee of the trustees lately voted $100,000. The woman's building is not to be constructed as a regular dormitory, however. It is to look more like a home, and to be modelled as such both outside and inside as far as possible.

With the tearing down of the Alexander house, an old landmark passes. The house was formerly called the Revolutionary Land Warrant house, because it was built from funds derived from the sale of public lands which had been granted the University by the state instead of cash.

When the University was reopened after the Civil War in 1875, the place was occupied by John deB. Hooper. Later it became the home of Eben Alexander, professor of Greek in the University and American Ambassador to Greece under Cleveland. C. W. Bain then took the place. More recently it has been occupied by Dr. J. B. Ballitt of the Medical School and its present occupant is W. E. Caldwell, professor of history.

The woman's building will be near the new Episcopal church which is to be just east of the old one, the latter not being disturbed.

TAR HEEL ELECTION

On Tuesday, May 1, the Tar Heel board will meet to make nominations for next year's staff officers. The result of the nominations will be announced in chapel on the following Friday, when the hall will be thrown open for further nominations. Monday, May 7, is the date set for the annual Tar Heel elections.
