

ONE TAR HEEL REPORTER TOOK FRESHMAN TEST

Reporter, in Search of News, Wanders on One of the Psychology Tests.

FROSHIES SCARED.

C-27-33 - serial number of the Freshman Psychology test is remembered by all Frosh and one Tar Heel reporter, who sauntered off towards Chemistry Hall Thursday night about 7:30 to find out what he didn't know. Acting quite naturally, the greenest of the green, he bumped into two Frosh on the way down. Replies to his numerous questions informed him that there were to be classes in three halls: Chemistry Hall, where they taught Chemistry; Murphy Hall which looked like the stadium, and Phillips Hall had a gallery.

Upon entering the hall, two co-eds were found monkeying with the switch, endeavoring to turn on the lights. Right there Mr. Frosh showed his manhood by crowding around the fair ones to offer matches and handkerchiefs. Then some on in the rear yelled "lights," another, "dark", while a whole chorus chimed in with "no test."

Finally by so much shoving from the rear the crowd, including the reporter, was pushed into the hall. Lights flashed on and the hall rapidly filled to capacity. The reporter found a nice seat right near the front and laid his report pad, which happened to be an old French quiz book, on the desk.

A short nerve-racking space followed, in which some one whistled, "Yes, We Have No Bananas"; others who had evidently visited the Pick, beat the Devil's tattoo and cried for music. Still others proposed that they organize against the Sophs.

About this time a tall guy whom someone said was a Doctor opened up by beating on the table. Then pamphlets were passed around with the warning that they weren't to be opened until a given signal, as part of the test was to find out if they were capable of following instructions.

At the given signal all opened up and started writing against time—the reporter along with the crowd. The first of the ten separate tests was very simple as, "write the letter which is the third letter to the right of the letter which is midway between M and O." There were only 19 other questions in the first test, the others being slightly varied.

When all had passed the ordeal, the Doctor man told them they might organize since it was apt to snow this winter, but that when they passed out they were to leave the pencils and pamphlets with his associate, who was standing at the door to keep the timid ones from playing hokey. The organizing scheme, however, fell flat. No one knew what to do and all were desirous of leaving.

But the episode didn't close at this juncture, for one fellow suddenly becoming frantic, pitched his pamphlet out the window and hastily followed it out via the same route.

Pi Beta Phi Sorority Installation Here

The local sorority that was recently granted a charter in Pi Beta Phi is being installed as a Chapter in the national organization this week end. The initiation ceremonies are in progress at the home of Dr. Caldwell next to the Episcopal church.

National officers are in attendance and are being entertained in the different homes of the patronesses around town. Women from other chapters are also visitors at the installation exercises.

The formal initiation takes place today. Following a banquet tonight comes a dance and tomorrow night the patronesses are to give the initiates and visitors a reception at Mrs. Venable's.

NEW EAST WILL BE REMODELED

The east end of New East is being given completely over to the Geology Department. Formerly some of these rooms were used by students as living quarters, but the expansion of the department has caused a great necessity for more room.

Dr. Joel H. Swartz has been added to the staff of instruction. Dr. Swartz is from John Hopkins, where he obtained his doctor's degree, and has been with the Tennessee Geological Survey for the past summer.

Dr. W. F. Prouty of the same department was with the West Virginia Geological Survey this summer.

Robert L. "Bob" Thompson, of New York City, formerly a member of the local literati, is now editor of the Fayetteville Observer.

BOLL WEEVIL INCORPORATED

The First Issue, the Freshman Number, is Scheduled to Appear October 10.

The "Carolina Boll Weevil" has just incorporated itself, and it is now published by the Carolina Boll Weevil, Inc. This corporation is composed of those who are or who have been students of the University of North Carolina. The publication is a humorous one on the type of other college comics, although it is soon to be one of the leading ones in the country, either North or South. On account of this change in the organization there will also be further improvements due to the added interest and closer cooperation. While not being an official publication of the University, it still remains a comic, because of the fact that only college men are connected with it.

From now on the Boll Weevil will be published and managed on practically the same plan as the Harvard Lampoon, the Yale Record, and the Cornell Widow, all of which are incorporated. The Boll Weevil will be published by students and alumni of the University of North Carolina. This magazine will be published in Chapel Hill, N. C., where all offices, both managerial and editorial, are situated.

At least five thousand copies of every issue are to be printed. The Carolina Boll Weevil will be on sale in twelve Southern States on railway trains, at railroad stations, and at all reliable newsstands. The states they will be sold in are, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, D. C., Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, Florida, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas.

While the corporation is a new firm the Boll Weevil has just completed a very successful year, the success of which from all indications is growing and will continue to grow. The chief offices are filled by: L. J. S. Brody, Business Manager, R. L. Felton, Jr., Editor and T. P. Cheeseborough, Jr., Advertising Manager. The remainder of the board is composed of students from all parts of North Carolina.

The first issue, the Freshman number, is scheduled to appear on October the tenth. It will be a forty-four page issue and the corporation invites comparison with any other college humorous publication.

Freshmen Must Take Gymnasium Work

The Gymnasium authorities are making arrangements to give every freshman periodical workouts in the gym this year. The work will be on a compulsory basis, and every first year man must, if not excused for some reason, take the workouts. The men will be divided into shifts, and each shift will have certain hours in which to work. In this way all the men can be handled. Heretofore, freshmen have evaded the ruling that all first-year men must have regular workouts in the gymnasium; but the gym officials are going to make it difficult this year for anyone to evade the ruling, for the present plan makes it easy to check up on all absences. Absences will be reported to the Registrar's office and if the student grows too delinquent he will be put on probation; further absences after he is put on probation will, of course, necessitate his being dropped from the University roll. Every freshman is supposed to report to the Gymnasium unless he is excused on account of self-help work, physical defects or has some other valid reason.

University Laundry Has Big Business

The University Laundry did a record business the first three days of this week, and yet only half of the student body was served, says Mr. Paulsen, the genial manager.

He says the employees will work nights for a time until the work and general routine become thoroughly established. Every effort will be made to equal the service of the past year, but the increase in the student body plus the steady growth of town work is taxing the laundry to its fullest capacity.

However, there is consolation in Mr. Paulsen's assurance that every laundry package will be delivered to each student in due time provided that the name and address are correct and the pieces enumerated on the laundry list.

Two large partitions have been completely torn out of the laundry in order to give more air, light, and room to the employees. Mr. Paulsen requests every student to read and abide by the laundry notice on the last page of the Tar Heel.

The Student Council suspended five men for the quarter and put two on strict probation for hazing.

THREE CARRBORO WOMEN OUSTED FROM CHURCH

Baptist Preacher Has Women Who Go Swimming Expelled from Congregation.

WAS FACULTY MEMBER

The vicinity of Carrboro was thrown in a state of amazement last week when three women of Carrboro were ousted from the Baptist church on the charge of going in a swimming pool in which there were men. The alleged charge and expulsion were preferred under the leadership of Reverend J. B. Davis, pastor of the Baptist church of Carrboro and a former member of the University faculty. The Carrboro community was greatly stirred by the action of the Reverend Davis, who was able to convince the deacons that the ladies in question deserved to be cast from the Baptist fold.

The puritanic pastor could bring no other charge against the women except that they were not properly observing the Sabbath and they were committing sinful acts by bathing in a pool in which there were men. Prior to this episode Reverend Davis has delivered several fiery sermons on the sinfulness of the modern observance of the Sabbath. He has condemned many forms of modern amusement and has harshly denounced the playing of "Rook" and other similar games according to reports.

After Reverend Davis had convinced his deacons that the ladies were no longer fit to remain in his church it seems that a little complication has set in. Now the ladies are about to prove that the good pastor's charges were hypocritical and that he himself was seen in a pool in which there were also several women at Lake View several weeks ago. They are now wondering if the pastors' experience on this occasion was not the reason why he has condemned the joint and simultaneous use of a swimming pool by both sexes.

At this time it is impossible to say whether or not this recent revelation by the ladies will have some bearing toward having them reinstated in the church.

CAFETERIA HAS IMPROVEMENTS

University Cafeteria Installs New Facilities for Serving its Patrons

The University Cafeteria has completed its new facilities for serving its numerous patrons. The most noticeable improvement is the duplicate serving counter that has been installed, so as to serve the same food on opposite sides of the room. This permits the forming of two lines, one on each side of the room, thus cutting the length of the line in two and halving the time required to get through the line. There are two cashiers, one for each line, so that no unnecessary time is consumed in getting out of the line.

With the new counter and the new machinery for mixing foods in the kitchen and the new ventilation fans the service will be much quicker and more satisfactory.

If the necessity for more space arises there can be put in at least twenty more tables. Plans are being made to have white glass tops on all of the tables in the near future.

On the right at the entrance will be placed a row of shelves for the hats so that they will no longer have to be thrown on a table or a chair.

The recently begun coaching school is apt to become of tremendous importance in the University's athletic development. Besides the large amount of raw material to choose from, probably the greatest reason for northern universities' superiority in athletics is that the majority of their men come from large prep schools and have been coached by highly paid instructors who have drilled into them the advanced methods which the larger universities use.

After the next few years, North Carolina will begin to get high school athletes who have had two or three years training by collegiate methods in football, basketball and track.

Last year, sixteen men took the course in coaching here. The enrollment of the second annual coaching school with the men's colleges and coaching addresses are as follows:

It is estimated that at least 98 percent of our freshest, meaning to say our newest, freshman class is already upporting its trousers with shiny new Carolina belts.

The big Carolina band lent no end of color to the Wake Forest game. R. L. Sides and his troupe should be a big feature to the coming games.

TRADITION

Has made GOOCH'S the night-time playground of Carolina. The diversion better fits the mind to hard study.

Said an unsolicited article in the Tar Heel. "It is more than the ordinary Cafe, it is an institution and since 1903 has become a vital part of Carolina life."
