

CARR IS NOW FIREPROOF

The Carr Building is no longer a death-aiding firetrap. Two brick firetowers have been erected in this dormitory and danger to students from possible fire has now been greatly diminished, according to word from the offices of Atwood and Nash, University architects, who have been remodeling several of the dormitories around the campus with the intention of making them safer for the occupants.

Fire escapes have also been ordered and will soon be installed in the New East, New West, Battle, Vance, and Pettigrew dormitories, according to Mr. Atwood.

Fraternities Move Into New Quarters

With the beginning of a new quarter, several of the Fraternities are making changes in their Halls. This week Theta Chi has moved from the Klutz Building to the new building, which is just being completed opposite the "Pick." Sigma Nu has moved to the same building from their old location.

Chi Tau and Gamma Delta have also taken up residence in the two middle rooms of the new building. A regular bodlam of washing, waxing, moving, and sweating has been going on there for the past few days.

Work to Begin On Connecting of Pipes

It is now time for occupants of the Old West, Old East, and South dormitories to let out one warwhoop, undress with a rush, rush on a bathrobe, rush into the shower room, and take a nice hot bath—the kind heretofore received by the said inmates in installments under the wearing showers of Bynum Gymnasium.

The long promised hot water—which occupants of these dormitories have long looked forward to—will soon be connected in a manner which will enable students in the three dormitories named to have hot baths.

Work on the connecting of the pipes to these dormitories will start at once, it is announced.

CO-EDS GO ON RAMPAGE

The masculine portion of the campus was rudely taken aback Saturday when the Co-eds sallied forth from Russell Inn and undertook to capture the tennis courts behind Memorial Hall, heretofore regarded as mere man's most sacred sanctuary on the Hill.

One round and plump member of the Co-ed colony was sighted indulging in mixed singles at about three o'clock. Shortly afterwards she made her departure and around four P. M. made her return, considerably strengthened by the addition of another member of her sex, the sponsor of last year's ill-fated knicker movement.

Why they left their court at Russell Inn and sought to take over one of the few courts on the campus, is a question for psychology experts well versed in the workings of a woman's brain. At any rate, the two adventurous Co-eds found the courts retaken and strongly fortified by inhabitants from Steele dormitory, and were repulsed with heavy losses.

The die-hard opponents of co-education at Carolina are pointing their fingers at this happening with an "I told you so" air along with the old saying "If you give them an inch they'll take a mile."

The University is soon to put Corbin Night Latches on the doors of all the dormitories, according to a statement made by B. L. Burch, Superintendent of Buildings. The order has already been sent in and the new locks should be fixed on every door the first part of February.

During the fall quarter the old lock system was the source of great trouble and expense to the University. Complaints of lost keys and poor locks poured into Mr. Burch's office daily to such an extent that a change in the locking system was decided upon. The new locks are similar to Yale locks with a master key system. A small deposit will be required from each student, and if a key is lost, a duplicate can be made quickly by the University, thus doing away with the former delay of sending to the factory for new keys.

Young men or young women of Carolina, Chapel Hill, or vicinity, interested in a summer course in First Aid and Life Saving should get into communication with Dean F. F. Bradshaw, according to announcement from the office of Dean of Students.

The American Red Cross plans this summer to conduct a First Aid and Life Saving Institute near Asheville, and people interested are requested to notify Mr. Bradshaw.

NORMAN FOERSTER

Norman Foerster, Professor of English, in collaboration with G. R. Elliott, of Bowdoin College, is the author of a new text book, "English Poetry of the Nineteenth Century" which has received favorable comments from leading college professors and reviewers. Dr. Foerster is using the book on the course he is giving this quarter, English 51. This is his second book within a period of two years, the first one being, "Nature in American Literature."

"English Poetry of the Nineteenth Century" contains well arranged selections of poetry from 1798 to 1914 intended to make clear the thought and development of poetic art of the period. While the major attention is given the chief poets, the secondary poets are not overlooked and are placed in the order of their importance, so as to afford a clearer definition to the scope of the period.

The MacMillan Company, Publishers, have the following to say of the book: "Unusually complete, balanced and illustrative of the central spirit and tendency of nineteenth century poetry, the book is well adapted, in both text and notes, for those who wish to do systematic reading of modern poetry. Its readers will be stimulated to enjoy, reflect, and discuss."

During the past week B. H. Serunian has been exhibiting a number of hand-made Persian rugs on the second floor of the Y. M. C. A. These rugs were shipped from Persia about six months ago and only arrived during the Christmas holidays. All of these are genuine hand-made rugs and are very beautiful. Several of them have been sold already, but there are still a number left to be seen. Persian curtains are also on display in the same room. Both the rugs and the curtains are different from any that are seen usually. They will be shown on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 3:00 to 5:00 to all who wish to see them in the same room.

PHI DEBATE PRELIMS

Preliminaries for the freshmen intra-society debate in the Philanthropic Assembly will be held Wednesday night, according to recent announcement.

The query to be discussed is "Resolved: That the United States should join the World Court."

About a dozen freshmen have announced their intentions of participating in the preliminary. The final debate will be held early during the winter quarter.

With the Varsity squad running smoothly, Coach Shepherd turned his attention to the Freshman Class and issued a call for practice early last week. Some hundred or more responded and the new Indoor Athletic Activity Building was overrun with the vast assemblage of Freshmen clad in a motley array of uniforms.

A glance over the men out for practice discloses a surprising paucity of promising material with but few showing more than mediocre ability. Coupled with this comes the disaster of four out of the seven most promising freshmen failing to pass off enough work last quarter to be on the eligible list.

The paring down process will probably start early this week and invisible pink slips will be handed out by the wholesale until the squad is reduced to workable proportions.

President Walter Murphey of the University General Alumni Association has called a meeting of the directors of the association to take place next Friday in Raleigh, according to announcement by Alumni Secretary Daniel L. Grant.

London, of Rockingham; Robert Lassiter, of Charlotte; R. R. Williams, of Asheville; Katherine Robinson, of Fayetteville; W. T. Long, of Roanoke Rapids; O. D. Coffin, of Raleigh; Burton Craige, of Winston-Salem; Mary Henderson, of Salisbury; Shepard Bryan, of Atlanta, Ga.; George Gordon Battle, of New York City; C. S. Carr, Norfolk, Va.; and S. E. Shull, Stroudsburg, Pa.

The basketball team of McGill of Montreal, Canada, recently made a tour of the northeastern part of the United States. A total of four games was played with American colleges and universities and all four were lost. The following were the teams played: Penn State, Army, City College of New York and the Crescent Athletic Association of Brooklyn.

There are 618 universities and colleges in the United States. New York has 50, Pennsylvania 48, and Ohio 40. Texas, the largest state, has only 20.

A monument of Lincoln and Juarez, the Mexican here, clasping hands across the border of the United States and Mexico is to be erected soon by the students of America.

The Barber Shop is still hunting. The huntsmen around Chapel Hill kill most of their game in the Carolina Barber shop.
