GENERAL JULIAN S. CARR

In the passing of General Julian S. Carr, the nation, state and University has lost a remarkable figure, a veritable Roosevelt in his many sided activities and accomplishments. He was a moving spirit in the educational and industrial development of the state, and as a soldier, philanthropist, and citizen, his leadership was an inspiration to progressive thought and achievement.

General Carr always showed a genuine interest in the University's welfare. Carr building bears mute testimony to this generous attitude. During his years as member of the board of trustees and executive committee, he lent his aid in piloting the University through trying times. Only a year ago, at commencement his services were recognized by the University when the honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon him.

General Carr was a true representative of the highest type of the southern gentleman, and he carried the spirit of the old South with him into modern times, never losing his broad ideals in the face of hardships times and cold business activity. His name will never be forgotten, and his work will live on.

GOLDEN FLEECE

The Senior Order of Golden Fleece, composed of the highest type of Carolina students, will hold its annual tapping Friday night. This organization through its lofty purpose, democratic character, spotless history, and noble ideals of its founder, Professor Horace Williams, has been the most instrumental factor in cementing student groups together. It was born in a critical stage of student life here, when the animosity between the ranks of fraternity and non-fraternity men threatened to bring about disastrous results. The campus was divided into contending groups, jealous of each other, and was tearing down the moral fibre of the student body through its unstable standard.

Horace Williams, philosopher, teacher, and adviser to students, who has devoted his life to inspiring young men with a realization of their own moral and intellectual power, and who has always fought for the best principles of the University, saw in the formation of the Golden Fleece a balm for the campus dissensions. His plan, called by many a foolish dream and an unpractical plan from an unpractical brain, proved to be the solution of the student difficulties. The motives of the Fleece were wholly unselfish, and its membership included the outstanding students regardless of their social position or affiliations. It supplied the unifying force that had been lacking, and the student body soon subordinated factionalism to a group consciousness.

From that day down to the present, Golden Fleece has sailed under its true colors. It is perhaps the one organization in which politics and personal likes and dislikes have not entered. It recognizes men who have excelled in athletics, debating, publications, and scholarship, giving preference to no one field, and requiring a solid character as well as individual accomplishment.

The Golden Fleece does not limit its work merely to the selection of men. It works in a quiet way through the individual members in the various student channels it represents, and many of the broadest movements on the campus in the past years can be attributed directly to Golden Fleece.

This year the problem of honoring the ten most deserving men will be difficult as is usually the case when there is such a large field to pick from, but whatever may be the final selection, it will represent the soundest opinion of the Fleece members.

OUR SWAN SONG

This is our swan song. With the next issue the new staff of editors goes into office in order that they may be well acquainted with their duties by next fall, and the old staff passes out of the picture.

As is usually the case with the college editor retiring from office, we feel both relieved and sorry to pass over the reins, for we have come to regard the Tar Heel as personal property, an affectionate sort of pet troublesome at times, with a voracious appetite for news that must be satisfied twice a week without fail.

The memories of pleasant associations formed through contact with the staff members and the indefinable satisfaction news editing affords, makes our resignation difficult, while recollections of scraps with the printers, business managers, and disgruntled readers, and the heavy responsibility of directing the paper make our parting pleasant. All the above has forced us to develop a strong sense of humor, for which we are grateful.

A word or two concerning next year's prospects might be fitting. Under the guidance of the Publications Union, installed this year, the Tar Heel has increased enormously in size of circulation. Naturally, the innovation of this plan, has brought up difficult problems for both the business and editorial departments, for in both cases, new systems had to be worked out. Next year's staff, profiting by a year of experimentation, should be stronger in every respect.

The lack of a school of journalism has likewise been a severe handicap this year. With no adequate training ground furnished by the University, the publications have had to break in new men, green and inexperienced. Next year, a man has been secured to teach Journalism who knows the newspaper game from both the theoretical and practical sides, and furthermore, he knows North Carolina and her dire need for trained journalists. As Irvin S. Cobb stated, "What North Carolina needs is a good press agent. She has practically everything else." The University is the logical training ground, and the man coming next year will have a golden opportunity to develop young press agents and newspaper men through the class room and college publications.

It should be the goal of next year's staff to pave the way for a daily. It cannot be done in a short time, but the movement may be started, so that in two or three years, the Tar Heel will appear daily, printed and edited by University students. This is not a pipe dream. The University is large enough now to support a daily newspaper, and with careful planning by the Publications Union Board, and the installment of a college press, a daily student newspaper can be realized.

The Heelers soon to go into office have shown an aptitude for news editing and writing, and should form the nucleus of a well balanced staff. The editors, Saunders, Rowland, Parker McIver, and company, have already shown their ability, and they are eager to begin. We wish them luck, and at the same time cannot help but feel a little sorry for them. Following the usual custom we sign 30, which in newspaper parlance means, "Good Bye."

BOOKS ON SALE BY U. N. C. PRESS

Books by Woodrow Wilson and Dinsmore Are Much in Demand on Market

The recently established University of North Carolina press, because of its number and high type of publications, is already proving to be an indispensable part of the educational facilities.

Two books are already on sale: "Robert E. Lee," an interpretation by Woodrow Wilson, and "Religious Certitude in an Age of Science," by Charles Allen Dinsmore. These books, although having been on the market for only two weeks, are steady sellers, and are giving great promise.

Mr. Wilson, in his book, while stating the ideas which dominated the great Confederate leader, unconsciously revealed his own ideas of government which he later put into such practical operation.

The book by Dr. Dinsmore shows the conflict of the intellectual force in man with the spiritual force, which retards advancement and belief. He says that knowledge belongs to religion as well as science, and that religious beliefs reach even deeper than scientific knowledge.

The Dinsmore volume comprised the McNair lectures of 1922.

The complete list of titles of books or studies which have been published to date by the press are as follows: "Law and Morals," by Roscoe Pound; "The Theory of Relativity," by Archibald Henderson, J. W. Lasley and A. W. Hobbs; "A Spanish Grammar," by Albert Shapiro; "The Scientific Study of Society," by Franklin H. Giddings; "Community Organization," by Jesse F. Steiner.

The first two of this list will be on sale shortly.

Roscoe Pound's "Law and Morals" will comprise the McNair lectures for 1923.

Shapiro's "Beginners Spanish Grammar" will appear during the Spring or Summer, and also E. W. Knight's "Education in the South."

The press has one more book scheduled for next December. "The Roads to Social Peace," by Professor E. A. Ross of Wisconsin, which form lectures for 1924.

The prospective publication of these volumes is in evidence that the major purpose of the press is already being realized; namely, to give the University standing in the field of publication commensurate with its reputation in teaching research and investigation.

The South is almost wholly a new field in this line of work, and the University, as a leader and pioneer, should have great success.

Dr. J. F. Dashiell attended meetings of the Southern Society of Philosophy and Psychology at the Johns Hopkins University during the Easter holidays, at which he read three papers reporting research work in progress in the psychological laboratory here. Dr. Dashiell was elected president of the Society for the coming year.

Prof. H. D. Meyer, of the Sociology Department, went to High Point Wednesday where he delivered an address as a part of the Boys' Program.

Prepares for Blue Ridge Delegation

Preparations for the biggest and best delegation that Carolina has ever sent are now getting into full swing, so that by the end of the quarter at least seventy-five members can be counted on to make the trip.

An information office in charge of Miss Mildred Chery has been set up where students can get pamphlets in the lobby of the "Y" building, and information about the Blue Ridge Conference. A small folder has been printed giving the general outline of the Conference program, a typical daily program, sketches of the prominent speakers, what to bring, cost of the trip, and directions for securing a place in the delegation. Fifteen or twenty inquiries have been coming to the office each day since it was opened, and there seems to be no doubt that the campus is more interested in Blue Ridge than ever before.

Carolina won the athletic championship banner last year, taking the pennants for wrestling, water sports, baseball, and track. All of these trophies can be seen in the "Y" lobby near the Blue Ridge information office. More athletes are needed this year, and students who are interested in handball, tennis, or any of the sports mentioned above, will find especial pleasure in representing Carolina at the Conference.

Band Makes a Hit With the Gate City

Carolina's fifty piece band made almost as big a hit with Greensboro as did Carolina's hardhitting, run getting, baseball team. The people of Greensboro were lavish in their praise of both the looks and the playing of the band.

The band went over in two of the big white busses from Raleigh. On arriving in Greensboro they treated the populace to a concert and parade until luncheon, which was served them at the Greensboro Y. M. C. A. After luncheon they were carried to the top of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance building where they gave another concert. In the afternoon they played at the ball game.

In the evening they played for the lawn party that the girls of North Carolina College gave for the University boys. The girls were quite overcome by the melody of the Carolina Music makers. As one fall young lass said, "Don't they look just too sweet for anything in their cute little white hats".
