Houdini comes the 21st. Perhaps he can tell us what no other living man can -for istance, when will the Graham Mcmorial building be finished; or what the building started next to Sutton and Alderman's was supposed to be; or why men living in dormitories have to wait from one to three days for mail after it gets to Chapel Hill; or other baffling mysteries.

Collier Cobb has called North Carolina "Nature's Sample Case." I agree with him, unreservedly. Within its fair bounds we have Pinehurst and Pete Murphy and politicians; we have corporations and co-eds and colleges; we have at this "deah old Oonivuhsity" fair samples of every freak of human nature, both wise and otherwise; we have profs with Ph.D.'s and tra-la-la's appended to their names in the self-sufficiency of supreme sophistication. Yes, indeed, in North Carolina may be found something of ever'thing.

Houdini has made death compacts with 16 of his closest friends, the agreement that the one first to die would communicate with the survivors through an agreed signal. The 16 have all been claimed by death, and Houdini is still awaiting their message in respectful serlousness.

The obvious step is to have at the University in the near future a group of negro singers from Hampton institute, or some North Carolina school like St. Augustine or Shaw, and let them sing more of this music in their own manner, which, Mrs. Tucker herself admits, is well nigh inimitable.
