

NEW SCHEME TO BE TESTED SOON IN DEBATE HERE

Oxford Union Plan Will Be Used In Meet With State College.

AUDIENCE TO BE JUDGE

Carolina and State Will Have One Man on Each Side in Debate on December 8th.

An entirely new innovation in intercollegiate debating for the University will be tried here in a scheduled debate to take place with North Carolina State college on Monday night, December 8, in Gerrard hall, according to announcement by M. M. Young, secretary of the debating council. The query is: "Resolved—That the proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution, authorizing the regulation of child labor, should be adopted."

The debate is to be held under the rules of the Oxford debating union, tending thereby to eliminate the scramble for judges' decisions which has in the past motivated many intercollegiate debating teams, according to followers of this system. Under the Oxford union plan, Carolina will be represented by only two men, one man upholding each side of the query. Carolina's affirmative speaker will debate with a State affirmative speaker as his colleague, opposed by a Carolina man and a State man on the negative. Time limit of the final speeches will be 15 minutes, with the exception of the first affirmative speaker, who will represent Carolina, and who will have a 10-minute first speech and a five-minute rebuttal. No set rebuttal speeches will be allotted to the other debaters.

Following the debate, the audience is granted the privilege of asking questions concerning the query, the questioner asking any man on either team that he or she so designates to answer the question. The questions will be held within a two-minute limitation. Following this open forum discussion, the audience will vote its convictions as to whether the affirmative or negative side should be upheld.

The preliminaries to select Carolina's speakers will be held Wednesday night, November 19, in the Phi hall, giving contestants only a very short time to prepare. This, it is stated, is rendered necessary by reason of the comparatively short time before the final debate is held.

It is also announced that judges in the preliminaries will inaugurate a slightly new system this year, whereby preliminary contests may be thrown out and declared null and void by the judges, if they are of the opinion that preliminary preparation is not up to standard. Consequently, the council urges men who try out for the debates this fall to put forth a great deal of effort in their preparation.

In the preliminaries for the State debate, the first speeches will be seven minutes in length, with each speaker having also a four-minute rebuttal.

The council is also planning a regular intercollegiate triangle debate before Christmas between South Carolina, William and Mary, and North Carolina, but the query has not yet been selected. It will be announced within the next few days, along with the dates of the final debate and of the preliminary.

It is announced that efforts will be made to announce the queries for the Washington and Lee-Johns Hopkins triangle and for the annual debate with West Virginia before the Christmas holidays, giving the men at least two months in which to prepare. The "big" triangle will probably be held in the winter quarter, with the West Virginia debate coming either in the winter or early spring quarter, followed by the triangle between Tulane, University of the South, and North Carolina during the latter part of the spring quarter.

Tar Babies Play Virginia Frosh Here

The freshmen will play their fourth game of the intercollegiate series with the University of Virginia freshmen next Saturday on Emerson field.

The Tar Babies have played three games, winning two of them and tying the third. They beat their first game, with Bingham, by a score of 20 to 0, and also defeated the University of South Carolina freshmen 19 to 7. The third game, with State college, resulted in a 7 to 7 tie.

The team is in the best of shape, and with no one seriously injured. Bo Shepard, captain and quarterback, was on the sick list for a while but is now calling signals again on the first team.

The team has shown a good brand of football during the whole season, and the coaches have been drilling it relentlessly in preparation for the coming battle.

MADE PRESENT OF MANNING PICTURE

Law School Receives Portrait of Former Head.

NOTABLES ARE ON HAND

Life Sketch of Manning Given by Justice Adams.

Before an audience of notable state officials, including Justices Clarkson and Adams of the Supreme Court, Secretary of State Everett and Attorney General Manning, the University law school received Thursday night, a portrait of Dr. John Manning, former head of the law school, from the hands of one of his descendants.

Justice Adams delivered the principal address of the presentation. He was followed by short talks by President Chase and Dean Ferson. B. S. Gay, president of the class, accepted the portrait in behalf of the law school.

Seven of the eight living sons and daughters, and a grandson of the late professor, were present.

Justice Adams gave a complete record of John Manning's life, from his early days in Edenton until he became head of the University law school. He entered the University as a sophomore in 1847, and made excellent grades while here. He was a member of the Phi society and was regarded as one of the best debaters in school. Two years after he came here he graduated with a class of 25 members.

After receiving his diploma he went with his father to South America, but soon came back and took up the practice of law. He had no political ambition and refused time after time the offer of public office. They wanted to make him secretary of state or judge of the superior court, but he wouldn't consider either. At the beginning of the Civil war he joined the Chatham Rifles as a volunteer and was elected first lieutenant. He was promoted to adjutant and while with the regiment at Yorktown was appointed received under the Secessionist acts and this position he held until arms were finally laid down. He took an important part in the proceedings of the Secession Convention which met in Raleigh on May 20, 1861, urging that force be met with force. Following the war he returned to his law practice.

In 1870 he was elected a member of the 41st Congress to fill out the unexpired term of the Hon. Robert Gilliam, who had died. In the next Congress he was succeeded by Sion H. Rogers of Wake county. He was elected a delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1875. While a member of the general assembly in 1881 he took an active part in security for the University its first annual appropriation.

He became head of the University law school by unanimous election of the board of trustees in 1881 and retained the position until his death.

Speaking of Dr. Manning, Justice Adams said:

"Mr. Manning's outstanding influence was refining; his moral energy commanded respect; his life was a rebuke to injustice and wrong. For the demands alike of the office and the forum he was thoroughly furnished by nature and training. He was qualified for achievement by the texture of his mind, by the honesty of his purpose, by his power of concentration and his capacity for research, by his personality, his conscience, and every impulse of his nature. "He treated the law not as a wilderness of single instances, but as a branch of systematized knowledge. For the wholesome traditions of the bar he had profound respect. He could tolerate Mr. Bumble's assertion that 'the law is a ass, a idiot' only in case it 'supposed' that which it never supposes; and his exalted conception of ethics was a sharp condemnation of Charles Macklin's aspersion, 'The law is a sort of hocus-pocus science that smiles in yer face while it picks yer pocket.'"

Dr. Chase in his talk said of Dr. Manning:

"There are few men in the history of this institution who have been held in such affectionate memory by their students. A life like that is a perfect thing within itself. It sets the ideal of those who come after us as a stimulus to further achievement."

"Dr. Manning was more than a teacher of law, more than a scholar; he was a man who in troubled times had faith that through education there would come a way out. His interest in the University was by no means confined to the law school. He had always been interested in every phase of the work of the institution. So it is but natural that the student body now holds him in affectionate regard."

FLYING SQUADRON'S WINGS CLIPPED ON TAR HEEL GRIDIRON WHEN JACK MERRITT PUTS ACROSS THE GOODS

Fast Fullback Remembers Richmond and 1922—Hackney Kicks Winning Field Goal—Matthews and Bonner Spoil Virginians' Air Attack—Whole University Team Plays Up and At Them—White Is V. M. I. Star.

The Carolina Ram, both human and otherwise, proved too much for V. M. I. last Saturday and the cadets from Lexington went down in defeat by the score of 3 to 0, a dropkick by Hackney from the 20-yard line at a bad angle bringing the score after Merritt, the human battering ram, had carried the ball for 30 yards around end to bring it into scoring distance. Merritt played the stellar game of the day and brought back memories of Carolina's great victory over V. M. I. at Richmond in 1922.

The teams were very evenly matched and fought on a par most of the time. Carolina, however, was a little the better and the score about tells the margin of difference between the two. The first downs were 8 to 6 with the Tar Heels having the larger number.

It was the first game for the new Carolina mascot, Ramesses II, and he nobly performed his duties and brought good luck and a win to the team. The Tar Heels played by far their best game of the season; they were up on their toes and fighting every second of the contest. Several breaks went to them, but it was more because they created the breaks and took advantage of their chances.

Merritt proved to be the star of the game. It was his great work through the line and around the ends that enabled the Tar Heels to overcome their opponents. His punting was exceptionally good and slightly outdistanced that of White, his rival. The Carolina line proved a terror on defense; the great White, six feet three inches of great football material, was unable to gain any appreciable distance through the line or around end. Whenever he received the ball there were four or five men to hit him at the same time. It was the rushing of the line that forced him to hurry his punts so that he could not get the distance that he had in practice before the game.

The Cadet aerial attack that has been going good all season failed against the Tar Heels. Of their seven passes only one was made good, while three were intercepted by the Carolinians, Bonner grabbing two and Matthews one. The Fetzerites only attempted one pass and it was unsuccessful.

Matthews displayed the same hard fight and speed that has characterized his play all season. He was down under the punts as usual and sent the V. M. I. backs to the ground time and again for no gain. Epstein also played a spectacular game. The Carolina line which appeared weak at the first of the season has developed into one of the best in the South Atlantic.

Robinson, who played his first entire game Saturday, looked especially good and appears to have won a permanent berth. Hogan also both started and finished his first game.

Devin, who was at quarter most of the time, generated the team well and at a critical time broke loose for a 40-yard run that perhaps saved the game from being a three all tie. In the last few minutes of play it was Carolina's ball on their own 10-yard line and the third down. V. M. I. would have probably received the ball close enough for White to send over one of his long-distance place kicks, but Devin on a fake play slipped through the line and away for 40 yards before he was downed. It gave the Tar Heels first down and the game ended before they lost the ball.

The Carolina cheering was the best that has been heard on Emerson field since the days of Scrubby Reeves, which is saying a great deal. During the half the Carolina freshmen marched out on the field and formed a living V. M. I. and then turned it into a U. N. C.

First Quarter

At 2:20 the Carolina team came on the field led by their new mascot and ran through a short signal drill. Five minutes later the Cadets rushed out and went through a short warming up. V. M. I. won the toss and elected to defend the east goal.

Merritt kicked to Caldwell who was downed on the 12-yard line. On the third play after the Cadets had failed to gain the center threw the ball over White's head and over the goal line. The Cadet fullback recovered and returned it past the goal line, but Carolina was offside and was penalized five yards, giving V. M. I. first down. Two tries at the line netted five yards and White punted. Carolina was again offside and was penalized five yards. It was V. M. I.'s ball on the 30-yard line.

Harmeling gained two yards but on the next play the Cadets were penalized 10 yards. White punted to Carolina's 35-yard line to Devin who returned seven yards. Merritt carried the ball 18 yards around right end. Three tries gained four yards and Devin tried a drop kick that was short. It was V. M. I.'s ball on their 9-yard line.

White punted to Devin on the 50-yard line. Merritt gained three yards. Devin went through the line for two yards. On an end run Merritt was thrown for a 20-yard loss. Merritt kicked to Foster on the 30-yard line. He returned 10 yards. The Cadets could not gain, and White punted, the ball rolling over the goal line. Carolina's ball on the 20-yard line. Two tries brought no gain and Merritt punted to Caldwell who was downed on the 42-yard line. Harmeling made five yards off tackle. Foster three yards through the line, White plunged for first down. End of quarter, V. M. I.'s ball on Carolina's 47-yard line.

UNIVERSITY GETTING INTO THE LIMELIGHT

Manufacturers Record and Menckins Devote a Little Attention to the N. C. State University.

The recent election of the University to the presidency of the American Association of Universities is interesting to note in connection with the following clipping from the November issue of the Alumni Review:

"Menckins puts the University down, until quite 'recently' as a 'fourth-rater.' The Manufacturers' Record of Baltimore rates Carolina more highly, thus:

"The University of North Carolina is one of the most progressive and aggressive educational institutions in this country for stimulating the people of that state into improved farming methods and to awaken them to full utilization of their limitless resources."

"Some other colleges and universities in the South are following a somewhat similar line, but so far as we have been able to learn none of them are doing the work on the same broad scale as the University of North Carolina. It is, indeed, an educational institution for the people of the entire state and for every class, rich and poor alike."

"Would that every other institution of learning in the South were doing the same work with the same energy."

Town Mystery Is Solved At Last

Students have often wondered what the building with only the foundations laid between Jack Sparrow's place and Sutton and Alderman's was intended to be. The mystery has been solved and future plans made. Mayor Robinson, the owner, has placed a contract for the steel of this building with a Greensboro firm and the building will soon be completed. The former plans were to make a hotel or a theater or a combination out of the building, but plans now are to make room for three stores on the first floor and fraternity rooms on the second floor, if there are demands from fraternities.

FAMOUS PIANIST LECTURER GIVES RECITAL FRIDAY

Comes Under Joint Auspices of University Lecture Committee and Music Department.

EXPLAINS AS HE GOES

Plays Passage and Then Informally Explains to His Hearers in Simple and Understandable Language.

A piano lecture recital will be given at 8:30 Friday night in Memorial hall by Professor Daniel Gregory Mason, of Columbia university. Professor Mason is being brought here under the joint auspices of the University lecture committee and the music department, and his recital will be free to the public.

Professor Mason comes from one of the best known musical families in this country. His grandfather, Dr. Lowell Mason, was the first teacher of music in the public schools of America, and was the father of this movement which has spread all over the world; he was a composer of renown, being the author of the setting of the frequently used hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee." Professor Daniel Gregory Mason was born in 1873, was graduated from Harvard university and has studied under some of the most prominent teachers in this country and France.

Professor Mason is known as one of the leaders in popular education in music in America. He is the author of fifteen volumes on music history, music form, and instrumentation. His five volume series on the appreciation of music is recognized as an authoritative work; his book, "From Song to Symphony," has been adopted as a text by the National Federation of Music Clubs.

As a lecturer and recital artist Professor Mason is known all over the world. He has published a large number of compositions for piano, string quartet, and symphony orchestra which have been produced by the most prominent artists in this country and abroad.

In his recital Prof. Mason sits at the piano, plays a few notes here and a longer passage there, analyzes and plays a whole composition, and takes his audience into his confidence as to how music is made. His explanations along this line are noted for their simplicity and freedom from technicalities.

The invariably large audiences that he attracts is certainly to be regarded as a good tribute to his popularity.

ARMISTICE DAY DULY OBSERVED

Exercises Held in Memorial Hall in the Morning.

PROF. CONNOR SPEAKS

Boxing and Wrestling Exhibition Given for Benefit of Local Post.

The University, the American Legion and the town combined to do reverence to the time when the great world war was brought to a close.

The University, the townspeople and the American Legion combined in an Armistice Day exercise yesterday morning in Memorial hall at 10:30.

The children of the Chapel Hill school, headed by their band, marched in a body to Memorial hall to attend the exercises of the day. The members of the American Legion also marched to the exercises in a body. Reserved seats were waiting for both the school children and the ex-soldiers. A good sized crowd attended the exercises.

The principal event of the morning was the address of Dr. R. D. W. Connor, of the University department of history. His address was excellently fitted to the spirit of the occasion. Supplementing this address on the program was the reading of the roll of dead among University alumni and citizens of the county. The audience stood while this list was being read.

Last night the American Legion held an exhibition of boxing and wrestling for the benefit of the local post of the Legion. Several fast bouts made quite a hit with the spectators. Gallegher showed up well in his bout. The wrestling matches also proved interesting. Shirley Waters and Poindexter both attracted a good bit of comment.

A number of students and townspeople attended the performance and the local post was given a good boost in its finances.

The editorial board of North Carolina Commerce and Industry will be entertained Wednesday evening at Winston-Salem by W. T. Ritter, who is a member of the staff. Members of the faculty who will attend the meeting are Professors Murchison, Brown, Zimmerman, S. H. Hobbs, Snell and Matherly.
