MCDONALD COACHING QUINT

Ten Games Are to Be Played on the Hill—University of Virginia and W. and L. Coming Here.

Carolina's flying quintet, Southern champions last year, registered her first official victory for the 1925 season when she defeated the Durham Elks team in Durham Thursday night by a score of 46 to 27. The University basketball team and the Elks will play a return game in Chapel Hill on Tuesday night in the year's first local game.

The schedule for the coming season has been released by the graduate manager of athletics and is one of the best that has ever been arranged. The team makes an extended northern trip, playing Harvard, the Naval Academy, V. M. I. and Washington and Lee in important games.

Out of the remaining fourteen games, ten are to be played in the Tin Can. Duke, Wake Forest, N. C. State, South Carolina, Virginia and Washington and Lee are among the five that will come to the Hill for games. Following the game with W. and L. University here on February 26th, the team goes to Atlanta for the annual S. I. C. tournament. The Tar Heels have won the southern crown twice within the last three years, and Coach "Monk" McDonald is working hard towards putting out another winning outfit.

Captain Jack Cobb, all-Southern forward last year, was the high scorer in the game with the Elks and promises to be the chief counter this year. Johnny Purser gave him a close race Thursday night and the Charlotte boy is giving promise of becoming one of the University's star shots. Dodderer, varsity center on last year's team is back in the harness with Billy Devin and Sam McDonald, brother of "Monk", and varsity player in 1923, holding down the other jobs.

The Tar Heels played the strong Charlotte Y team during the Christmas recess and nosed out the association team 35-33. Bill Dodderer was unable to attend, and Coach McDonald performed for the Queen City people, shirting Purser to center.

COACH BOB GIVES TRACK'S HISTORY

Speaks to Freshman and Varsity Candidates.

CAROLINA RECORD GOOD

University Won State Championship Past Three Years.

At a meeting of both varsity and freshmen track men last Wednesday night, Coach Bob Fetzer gave to the men a brief review of Carolina's track history during the last ten or twelve years.

Coach Fetzer explained that during the years 1910 to '13 Carolina track made good progress. This was during the advent of Coach Cartmell, who for three years was head coach for Carolina. Cartmell is now coaching track at Penn State University.

After Cartmell left Carolina track slumped and did not regain its importance until 1923, when Coach Fetzer took over the coaching reins.

Since 1922 track has developed rapidly until it has regained its rightful position in major athletics. In that year the Tar Heels lost only one dual meet, which was won by State College with only a margin of two points. Carolina has won the state championship meet for the last three years, and scored more points in the last years state meet than the rest of the colleges combined. In '22 and '23 two triangular meets were lost outside the state, one to Clemson and the other to Georgia.

In 1924 Carolina won all the dual, triangular, and State Championship meets. She finished second in the S. I. C. invitation meet held at Charlottesville, Virginia taking first place. There were seven participants in this meet.

During last season eight of the University records were broken by members of the track team. Some of these records have been established for nearly ten years.

For this year the present plan is to develop a large number of men so as to have a well-balanced team, one which has the ability to score heavily, not only in first places but in second and third places. This will be perfected before the regular season begins. All candidates will be given early training when those in charge will have time to give their attention to every man. Later on the coaches will be forced to give all their attention to those men who have shown track ability and who will constitute the team in competition.

Dr. Henderson Now In English "Who's Who"

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department, delivered an address before the New England society of Charleston on Saturday, December 20. This society was organized before the Revolution and is one of the oldest of its kind in the country. Many prominent men of the past have been associated with it. The annual address two years ago was delivered by President Coolidge.

Dr. Henderson has also been recently notified that his name and a short sketch of his life and work will appear in the new edition of the English "Who's Who." This is considered a great honor as only a very few Americans of international fame are given the distinction.

WEIL LECTURES WILL BE GIVEN BY WM. WHITE

Popular Kansas Editor and Publicist Secured by Lecture Committee.

TO LECTURE IN APRIL

Announcement Will Probably Carry Much Interest to Lovers of Letters and Literature.

An announcement of great interest to the University and the State is that the Weil Lecture Committee has secured for the Weil Lectures in April no less distinguished and interesting person than William Allen White, perhaps America's most popular editor and publicist. Mr. White's latest volume is a remarkable interpretation of Woodrow Wilson published by Houghton Mifflin Company and lifts Mr. White a notch higher in the list of American letters and literature. So well is the volume written that one sits down and tends to read it from beginning to end as an absorbing story of personalities and social color. His interpretation of the South as a molding influence on Mr. Wilson is not only comprehensive but beautiful.

Mr. White is, of course, known as the vigorous editor of the Emporia Gazette, and a long list of best sellers, including a volume from MacMillan in the last few months on politics and citizenship. But perhaps his recent campaign for Governor of Kansas on an independent ticket, his vigorous writings on current problems, and his fine personality will be the things which appeal to those who are fortunate enough to hear him at Chapel Hill, to read his articles in The Journal of Social Forces and his final volume published by the University of North Carolina Press.

It is hoped that so stimulating a personality and so clear-cut thinking will interest the students of the University and break through their static lack of interest in matters of intense social interest in which the state at large is both interesting and progressing.

PROF. KOCH BACK FROM NEW YORK

Saw Seventeen Plays During Nine Days.

SEVERAL CONFERENCES

Three Carolina Alumni Are Now On Broadway.

By W. S. McIver

Professor Frederick H. Koch returned recently from a holiday trip to New York City where he visited a number of his friends of the theatre and saw many of the outstanding productions of the season.

Among the prominent people with whom Prof. Koch conferred on his annual Christmas visit to New York were Professor Baker, of Yale, Hatcher Hughes, Maxwell Anderson, and Lawrence Stallings.

Professor Baker, formerly of Harvard, lately accepted the head of the Department of Drama at Yale with an endowment of $1,000,000. From this fund a new theatre will be built at Yale which will exceed anything of its kind in the country. Prof. Baker has invited the Carolina Playmakers to play there next fall.

Maxwell Anderson and Lawrence Stallings are the co-authors of "What Price Glory," which is playing to standing room. Maxwell Anderson hails from North Dakota, and was a student at the University of North Dakota when Professor Koch was at the head of the Dakota Playmakers there, appearing in some of his productions. Lawrence Stallings is an alumnus of Wake Forest College, and was on the staff of the New York Herald for a while.

Hatcher Hughes, alumnus of the University of North Carolina, whose play, "Hell-Bent for Heaven," dealing with the North Carolina mountaineers, won the Pulitzer Prize last year, has written another play, "Ruin's," which will be produced at the Provincetown theatre. This play also portrays the life of Carolina mountaineers. "Hell-Bent for Heaven" has been translated into French and is now being produced in Paris.

In addition to a number of conferences Professor Koch had time enough to see 17 plays in the nine days he spent there. He stated that the season was remarkable for its variety of really excellent plays—both tragedies and comedies. Of the best tragedies, Eugene O'Neill has three: "Desire Under the Elms," a New England farm tragedy; "S. S. Glencaron," and "The Emperor Jones." "What Price Glory," by Lawrence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson, is playing to standing room and bids fair to continue.

Of the American comedies, those of

WORK BEGUN ON NEW METHODIST CHURCH BUILDING

The New Church Will Cost a Total of $220,000 When Completed.

724 METHODISTS HERE

Students Show Great Interest In Activity of Big Steam Shovel Doing Excavating Work.

The construction of the much needed new Methodist church is now well under headway. Each year the number of Methodist students has increased until it has become necessary to build another and larger church. This year there are 724 Methodists registered in the University.

The joint commission representing North Carolina Methodism and created for the purpose of building an adequate Methodist church on the Hill let the contract to Jewell and Riddle for the sum of $159,550. This contract only includes the church and the connecting unit, and does not cover the lighting, heating, organ, and furniture. The total cost of the lot, church furnishings, and organ will amount to about $220,000. Of this amount the boards have appropriated one half, and the remainder is to be raised by subscriptions taken throughout the state. About $50,000 of this amount has already been subscribed, the remainder is to be subscribed the coming year.

Mr. C. D. Riggsbee, contractor of Durham, is doing the excavating. He is using an Eric Steam Shovel, which scoops three-fourths square yards of dirt at each dip, and which keeps about fifteen teams and trucks busy. The dirt is being placed between Peabody Building and the new hotel. Much interest in the work of the shovel has been displayed by the students and the big snorting iron monster has a gallery of interested spectators from early morning until late in the afternoon.

The church is being built in one of the most advantageous spots of Chapel Hill, as it will occupy the places where the old Barbee house and store stood. The old store has recently been used as the Buccanner office.

It will be built of colonial architecture, its spire rising 170 feet above the ground. The architect, Mr. James Gamble Rogers, of New York, is taking great interest in the work. It will be built of common red brick, the connecting unit extending across the walkway through the church yard to the library.

A brief ceremony was held last Tuesday at noon, when the ground was broken. The exercises were conducted by Rev. Walter Patten; among others present were Mrs. Patten, Robert L. Strowd, Mrs. Algernon S. Barbee, Mrs. Marvin Stacy, E. W. Knight, L. R. Wilson, and Howard W. Odum.

MAGAZINE BOASTS A STRONG STORY

Content of Merit and a Good Cover.

IS LIKE BURLINGTON

But It Succeeds In Being Bigger and Better.

Like the municipality of Burlington, N. C., the Carolina Magazine aspires to be bigger and better; unlike said municipality, the Carolina Magazine is succeeding, progressing at least arithmetically. We regret that the present editors may not guide its destiny for several years to come.

The December issue comes from the press in an especially attractive cover and boasting a content of merit. It is remarkably well balanced.

Robbins' Fowler's poems show versatility and ability; his metrical arrangements are rather unsure and he is guilty of several strained rhymes, but Asher is one of the best undergraduate poems we have ever seen. Cindy, a short story by Randolph Spear, is a real short story. The dialect is inconsistent, but not enough so to detract. The Playmakers might do well to look into the plot. It is a potentially good one act play. The Three-Ways King is a trivial nothing but very well written in imitation of Sandburg. The Book Margin Ballet is a mediocre result of an original idea. The Pig and the Blind Goddess won't keep a sleepy person awake, but it is amusing and concludes in a blind-alley which is totally obvious or unexpected, we can't decide which.

Malcolm Young subtly suggests that he has discovered something in Modern Realism in Chaucer's Prologue. Perhaps he has; if so, he has concealed it pretty thoroughly. He does show a gratifying familiarity with Chaucer and manages a few bits of refreshing satire. The Lure of the Hinterland is a strange and exotic sketch to come from a college student. It is written with a decided

TAR BABIES HAVE A GOOD SCHEDULE

Play Nineteen Games During 1925 Season.

SHEPHERD IS COACHING

Two All-State Men Are Out for Positions.

The freshman basketball squad will play 19 or more games this season. The present schedule is probably the best the freshmen have ever had. About 100 men were out at first but the number has decreased to some extent.

The season opens January 15, the game being with Durham High School, at Chapel Hill. On or before February 16 the squad goes to Virginia, the trip lasting until the 21st. Six games will be played, four with Virginia colleges and two with prep schools. Four games will be played at Chapel Hill after the return from the Virginia trip.

All the games have been definitely arranged except two with Virginia. It is expected that one game will be played with the Cavaliers during the northern trip, and one later at Chapel Hill.

Carlisle Shepard, captain of the Carolina basketball team in 1921, is coaching the freshmen. Shepard has an abundance of good material from which to pick.

The squad has been working hard, mostly on signal practice and goal shooting. Practice games have not been held and no man is sure of a place as yet. The first string team will not be picked for some time yet.

Two all-state men, Neal and Delaney, both of Reidsville, are out for the guard positions. Morris of Charlotte and Farrell of Woodberry Forest are also out for guard. Vanstory, of Greensboro, Skinner, of Smithfield, and Makepeace, of Sanford, are working hard at forward. Crinkley, of Raleigh, and Newcomb, a New York man, are trying for the center position.

CAROLINA DOES NOT PLAY YALE IN 1925

University of Georgia Will Probably Be Played Instead If Game Can Be Arranged.

Announcement of the schedule of the Yale Bulldogs for 1925 brings out the information that Carolina will not open the season for them as she has for the past few years, Middlebury, a small Vermont college, filling the place in the schedule once occupied by Coach Fetzer's charges.

Mr. Woolen, graduate manager of athletics, stated last fall that he was considering this move on the part of Carolina and hoped to be able to book some strong southern team such as Georgia in the place of this game, playing it later in the season, however, and alternating between Chapel Hill and the opposing home field. As yet no definite information has been given out as to who will take the place of Yale on Carolina's schedule but it is presumed that this suggested move will be made.

Religious Workers Council to Meet

The January meeting of the Religious Workers Council will be held at the Methodist hut Monday evening at 6 p. m.

The Methodist church will provide the supper, and a special program will be rendered.

All members are requested to be present.

Miss May Peterson, known all over the world as one of the greatest living sopranos is to sing in Memorial Hall at 8:30 o'clock tonight. Miss Peterson is very well known to North Carolinians having sung in the state on many occasions and having a host of friends and admirers in most of our cities. Her charming manner and brilliant personality immediately win friends for her wherever she appears, and her popularity is unequalled by any of the women singers except Schumann-Heink. Tonight's concert marks her first appearance here.

After several successful seasons with the Opera Somphe in Paris, Miss Peterson joined the Metropolitan Opera Co. in New York six years ago where she has been given the popular title of "The golden girl of the Metropolitan"; she has sung the leading roles in five of the principle operas produced at the Metropolitan, and her duets with Caruso have been hailed as the finest productions of the N. Y. seasons. She has sung with all of the largest orchestras in this country and abroad, and has given concerts in practically all of the large cities in the world. In her concerts she has the record of responding to more encores than McCormack, and as being the most gracious singer since the day of Mme. Nordica, who was so liberal in pleasing her public.

The critics have praised Miss Peterson, in the highest terms—"a voice of unequivocal beauty", "a perfect singer", "rare personal charm", "the wonders of that glorious voice", "an artist of the highest rank", "a lyric voice of extreme purity and caressing sweetness", "real musical feeling and great intelligence", "a real and full-bodied soprano, well placed and of truly musical timbre".

Practically every critic has commented on Miss Peterson's personal charm and beauty, the Baltimore Sun calling her the most beautiful woman on the concert stage. She is a native born American, in private life the wife of a prominent colonel in the recent war. Miss Peterson will stay at the Carolina Inn while in Chapel Hill, and expects to remain from Thursday night until Monday morning. Mr. Weaver will act as her accompanist for the local concert.

Members of Faculty Address Alumni Clubs

A large number of alumni associations held meetings during the holidays. Daniel L. Grant, secretary of the General Alumni Association, reports that all the meetings were taken with the seriousness of purpose that has characterized the forward strides of this work in the past few years.

Professor W. S. Bernard attended meetings in Richmond, Va., and Lenoir where he addressed the alumni of those places. Dr. E. C. Branson addressed the Wayne county alumni at Goldsboro during the holiday period. W. N. Everette, president of the General Association, spoke to a gathering of University men in Asheville, while W. L. Long, of the class of 1909, addressed a meeting in Charlotte. Dr. R. D. W. Connor will speak before a meeting at Concord soon.
